DRILLERS . . . DEVOTION . . . DIMENSIONS—the perfect cohesion of these words best expresses what the 1968 Oracle is about. What must exist in each student if he is to derive significant meaning and value from his education? What above all else is involved in building and living up to the Driller tradition? The concept of devotion answers both of these questions. Symbolic of the devotion which radiates from within each student at BHS is the light which shines atop the derrick. This light, this devotion, permeates every dimension of life for every student with energy and interest aimed toward the fulfillment of goals. Self development, school pride, personal involvement—these are the ultimate DIMENSIONS OF DEVOTION, the essence of high school; from them a student realizes that devotion to various dimensions of achievement is tantamount to success in life and purpose in living.

Dimensions

of Devotion

Graduates solemnly proceed into the auditorium at the end of the senior year. In these moments a student reflects on all that has brought him to the realization of his goal, and at the same time he ponders future goals and aspirations.

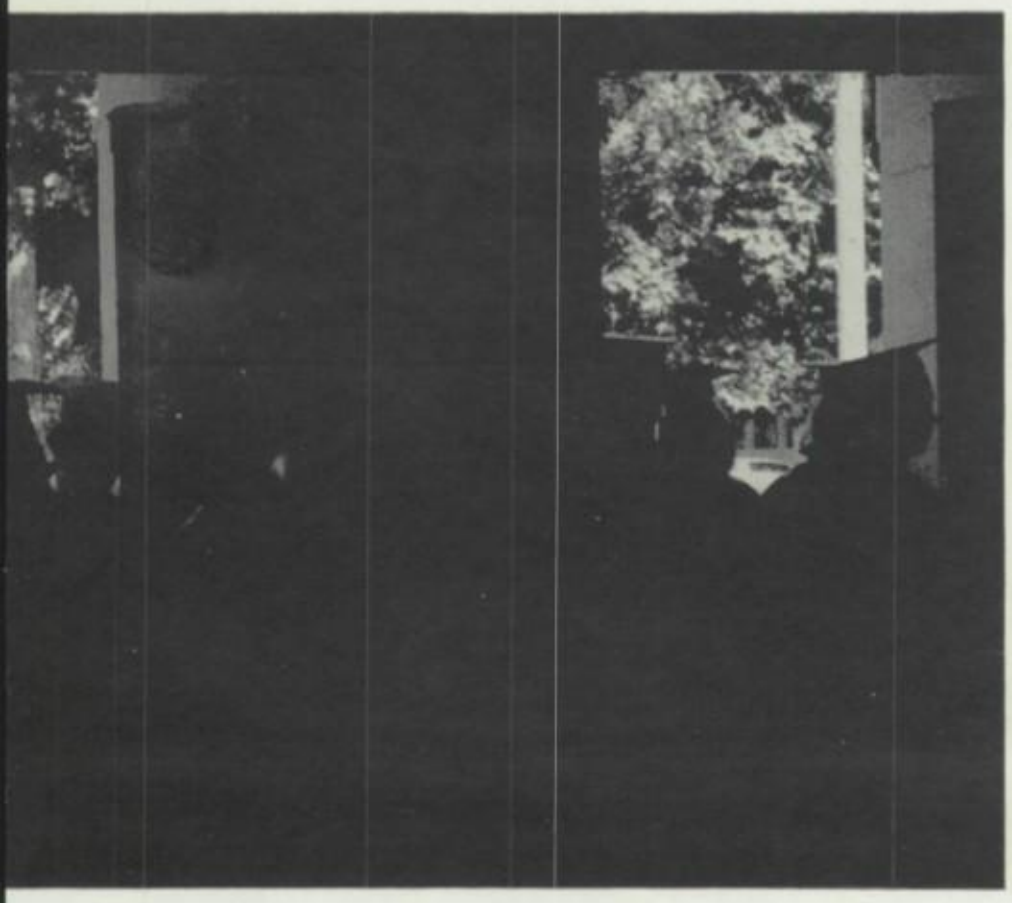

Dimensions of Individual Devotion Creat

Projecting imagination into the future creates happy and impossible dreams to be accomplished only through devoted efforts.

Concentration provides the key to understanding the meaning of a complex concept, as determination sustains the ambition for achievement.

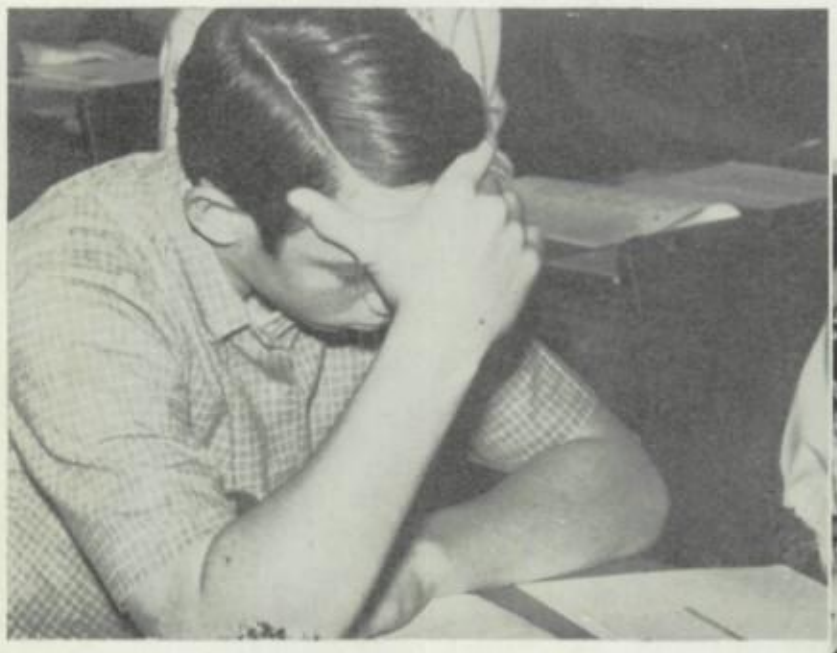

Goals for Attainment

In 1968, 675 students passed through the halls of Bakersfield High School for the last time. In four years each student develops talents and abilities through devotion to making the most of opportunities presented by the curricular and extracurricular program. Each year a student is confronted by more difficult tasks to accomplish and more complex concepts to understand; as a result his mind ascends to higher and higher degrees of achievement until the pinnacle of graduation is realized. From this point there are other high peaks and lofty goals to strive for and to attain. Because America is the land of the free, each student is educated with freedom to dream and to aspire, always in hope of realization through devotion to individual goals.

For every student several flights of stairs must be climbed each day. Before reaching the pinnacle of high school graduation, each student must also climb the staircases of mental and emotional development.

Academic Dimensions Require Effort i

As a representation of pride in academic ability, a student performs to his utmost capacity in the feedback of knowledge through testing.

In expressing his ideas, a student attempts to communicate thoughts gained through learning exercises and academic experiences.

Devotion to Learning

The dimension of greatest significance in high school education is the attainment of academic success. The effort each student devotes to academic achievement determines what he gains in the growth of knowledge from his schooling experience. In the classroom a student learns to give verbal and written expression to his thoughts and ideas; as he absorbs knowledge his mind becomes tuned to meet the potential demands of the future by learning to apply his natural abilities to the tasks of the present. By fulfilling homework assignments and studying for tests, a student develops responsibility, discipline, and pride. Because it supplies the means to gain knowledge, devotion to academics is the key that unlocks the door to the future.

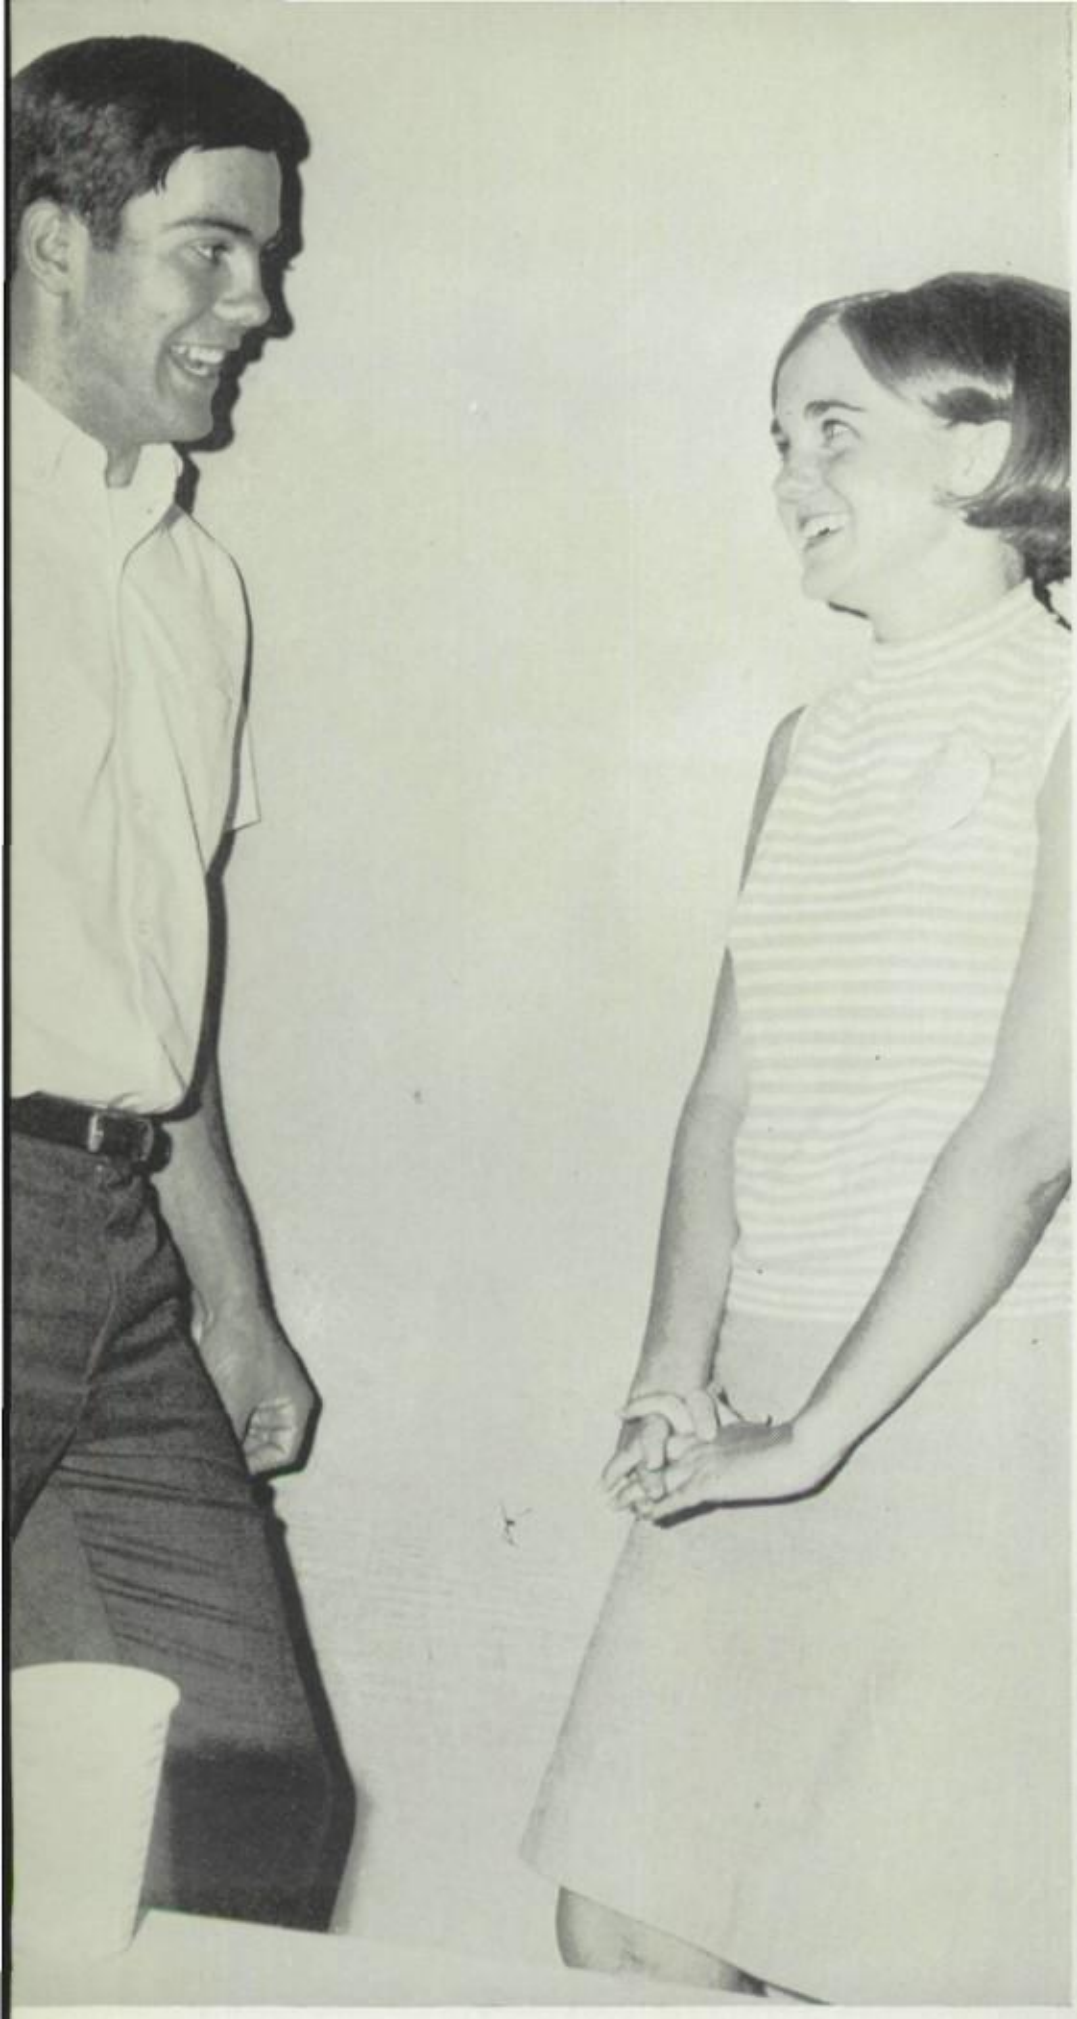

As a catalyst in the chemistry of learning, a teacher provides leadership, motivation, and meaning to the expansion of a student s academic knowledge.

In the classroom environment a student experiences academic education in action, as he listens and works to increase his scope of understanding.

Good Times at School

The most enjoyable dimension of high school life is each student's association with other students. To gain relief from the routine of classes, the pressures of tests, and the burden of homework, a student finds another student's company the easiest way to relax and enjoy life. In making friends a student extends his personality by taking an interest in others. Between classes and during lunch friends meet and talk — sharing experiences and the latest gossip, joking around and planning for the weekend. At dances, bodies move to the tempo of the music and hearts beat to the excitement of "boy meets girl." The dimensions of social life fill the most wonderful years of a lifetime with experiences devoted purely to fun, enjoyment, pleasure, and happiness.

Meeting the right person and knowing it brings a beaming smile to the faces of a boy and girl. One casual moment can blossom into many hours of happiness together.

In formals and tuxedoes or in cutoffs and tennis shoes, a school dance provides the ideal setting for the pursuit of pleasure or the pleasure of pursuit.

-Full-Time Devotion in Social Dimensions

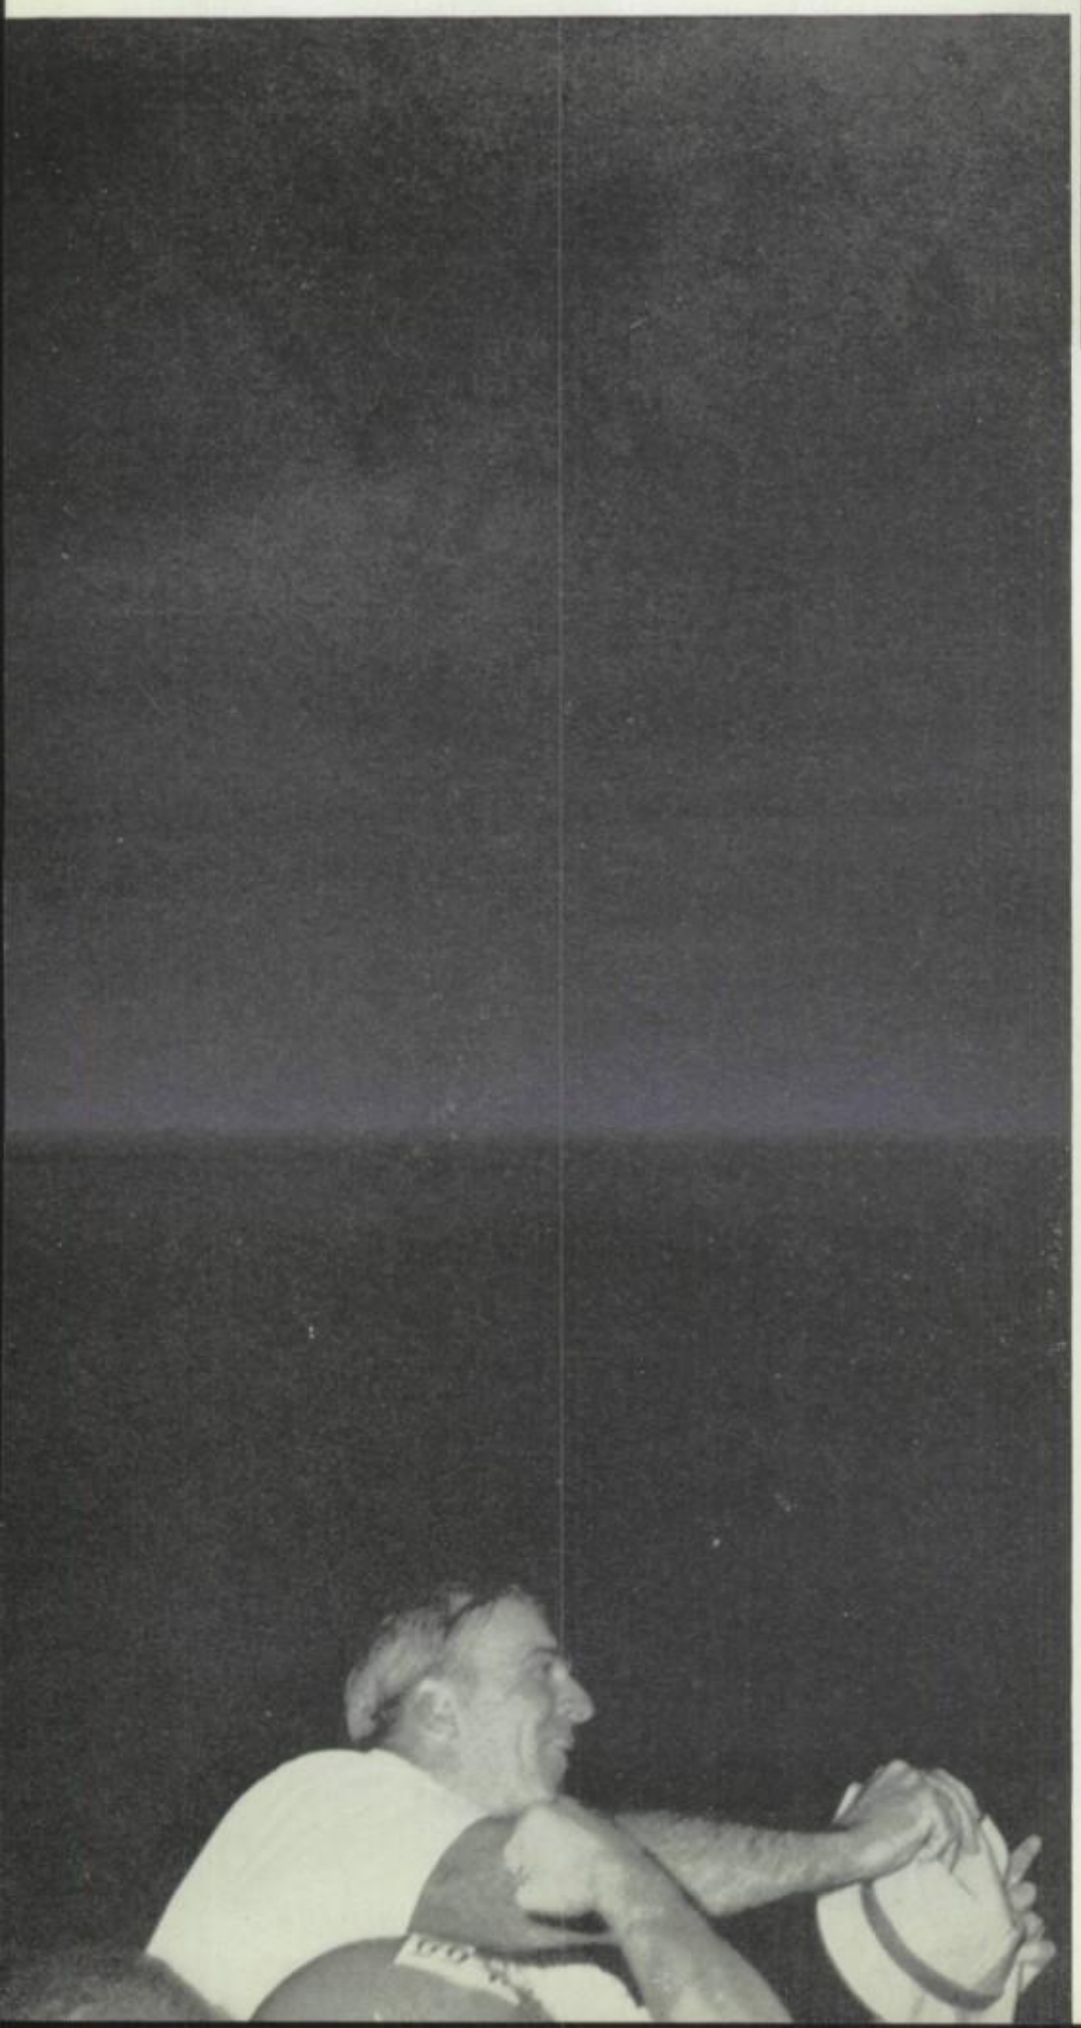

Noon in the cafeteria is the perfect time and place to enjoy mixed company. Between bites of food and attempts to study, nightly dates and weekend plans are made.

In the quad at lunch guys get together to joke around and have fun to liven up the school day. In many respects the friends a student makes at school are as important as attempts at scholastic success.

No. 1 Teams, No. 1 Spir

More than anything else, the spirit of "We're No. 1!" made 1967-68 a year of fond memories for all Drillers. No finer example of devotion can be seen than the countless hours which spirit leaders sacrificed to build school spirit to the feverish pitch that it attained. In arousing the student body to visible and vocal expressions of enthusiasm, the spirit leaders organized a special car caravan to the football practice field, planned breakfast, noon, and after-school rallies, and led Driller rooters in cheering at all sporting events. Deafening sounds of spirit resulted in producing an emotional lift to arouse Driller athletes to greater efforts toward success. For all Drillers the spirit of 1967-68 was tangible evidence of true devotion, something to be enthusiastic about.

Up in the air on the shoulders of his players, Coach Briggs glides on the winged spirit of victory to claim the valley championship trophy for BHS.

No idle pride has BHS in boasting the tops in football and other sports, as well as demonstrating the tops in school spirit.

Two Dimensions of True Driller Devotion

Spirit leaders arouse boisterous cheers at the jam-packed breakfast rally on the morning of the North High football game. The early enthusiasm lasted long into the evening's encounter through to the climactic conquest.

Drillers' supporters show that No. 1 spirit as they race onto the practice field to inject the football team with the extra boost of enthusiasm needed for victory over North High.

In Memoriam

Dedication

Devotion to Bakersfield High School in his job and devotion to students in his work has involved Mr. Al Dennis in a position of importance to everyone at BHS. Never expecting thanks for his efforts and never receiving recognition, Mr. Dennis has epitomized the ideal of devotion through 30 years of service to BHS.

In his role as Director of Student Finance, students, faculty, and parents recognize Mr .Dennis' devotion to the responsibilities of his job—from preparing the student body budget to operating the student store, and including much more than that. However, in his direction of the school's photography program, the Oracle staff recognizes Mr. Dennis' major devotion. For many years he has worked tirelessly in meeting the demands of Oracle publication; his loyalty and service are as endless as his work. Photography is his first devotion, his hobby, and this involvement is manifested in Mr. Dennis' commitment to the Oracle.

His effort in various dimensions of school activity represents the utmost quality of devotion to others. In fulfillment of the theme DIMENSIONS OF DEVOTION, the 1968 Oracle is dedicated to Mr. Al Dennis.

Classes lend a sense of unity and order to the dimensions of high school society. With the sense of pride and devotion students experience in class unity through government and projects, each class develops a character and personality all its own. In class structure students share an identity through the many friendships made as well as the pride taken in building class spirit and achievement through activities. Graduation culminates a very meaningful class association for seniors, but at the same time commences invigorating independence, offering new friends to meet and new challenges to conquer.

Graduation Glorifies Success of Seniors

Executing their final year of education and study on the secondary level, seniors often reflect upon their term at Bakersfield High School, noticing many changes which have occurred to themselves and to people and things with which they have been associated. Membership in Senior Class Council enabled seniors to appreciate the changes occurring in school life. By carrying out many activities and functions annually performed by the senior class, senior students achieved a feeling of success and fulfillment that made graduation more meaningful; while looking back occasionally upon past experiences at BHS, the senior mood was also well-expressed by saying, "Man, am I glad to get out of here!"

In Senior Class Council, President Paul Puder leads the discussion of several senior subjects, including class gift, class banquet, and graduation.

Seniors of Special Merit

High school graduation marks the culmination of four years of rugged competition; the greatest rewards of this competition are the wisdom and maturity gained through experience. In addition to the personal gain of character development, several seniors receive tangible evidence of their emulation. These awards for achievement are made by organizations desirous of encouraging high school students in academic, vocational, and citizenship training.

Both Daughters of the American Revolution and Soroptimists honor girls who excel in leadership, citizenship, and service. Experience in leadership and participation in government are offered to representatives at Boys' State and Girls' State. The Harry Coffee Award is presented to outstanding sportsmen in various fields of athletics. Bank of America honors academic achievement in fine arts, vocational arts, liberal arts, and science-mathematics. Gold Seal winners and National Merit Scholarship semi-finalists represents success in competition of scholastic aptitude. Collectively, these awards recognize individual devotion to excellence in quest of accomplishment.

Prom Project Presents Giant Job for Juniors

Only through cooperation, desire, and hours of diligent work can a definite goal be attained; juniors at Bakersfield High School were made aware of this as they strived to create a successful Junior-Senior Prom. Being perhaps the largest and most involved of all council projects, the formal dance entailed much talent, initiative, originality, and energy on the part of the Junior Class Council in making a memorable year-end extravaganza. Other activities and projects filled the work time of council members throughout the rest of the year, proving that individual capabilities and meaningful efforts combined through group cooperation can and does create noteworthy results from ambitious goals.

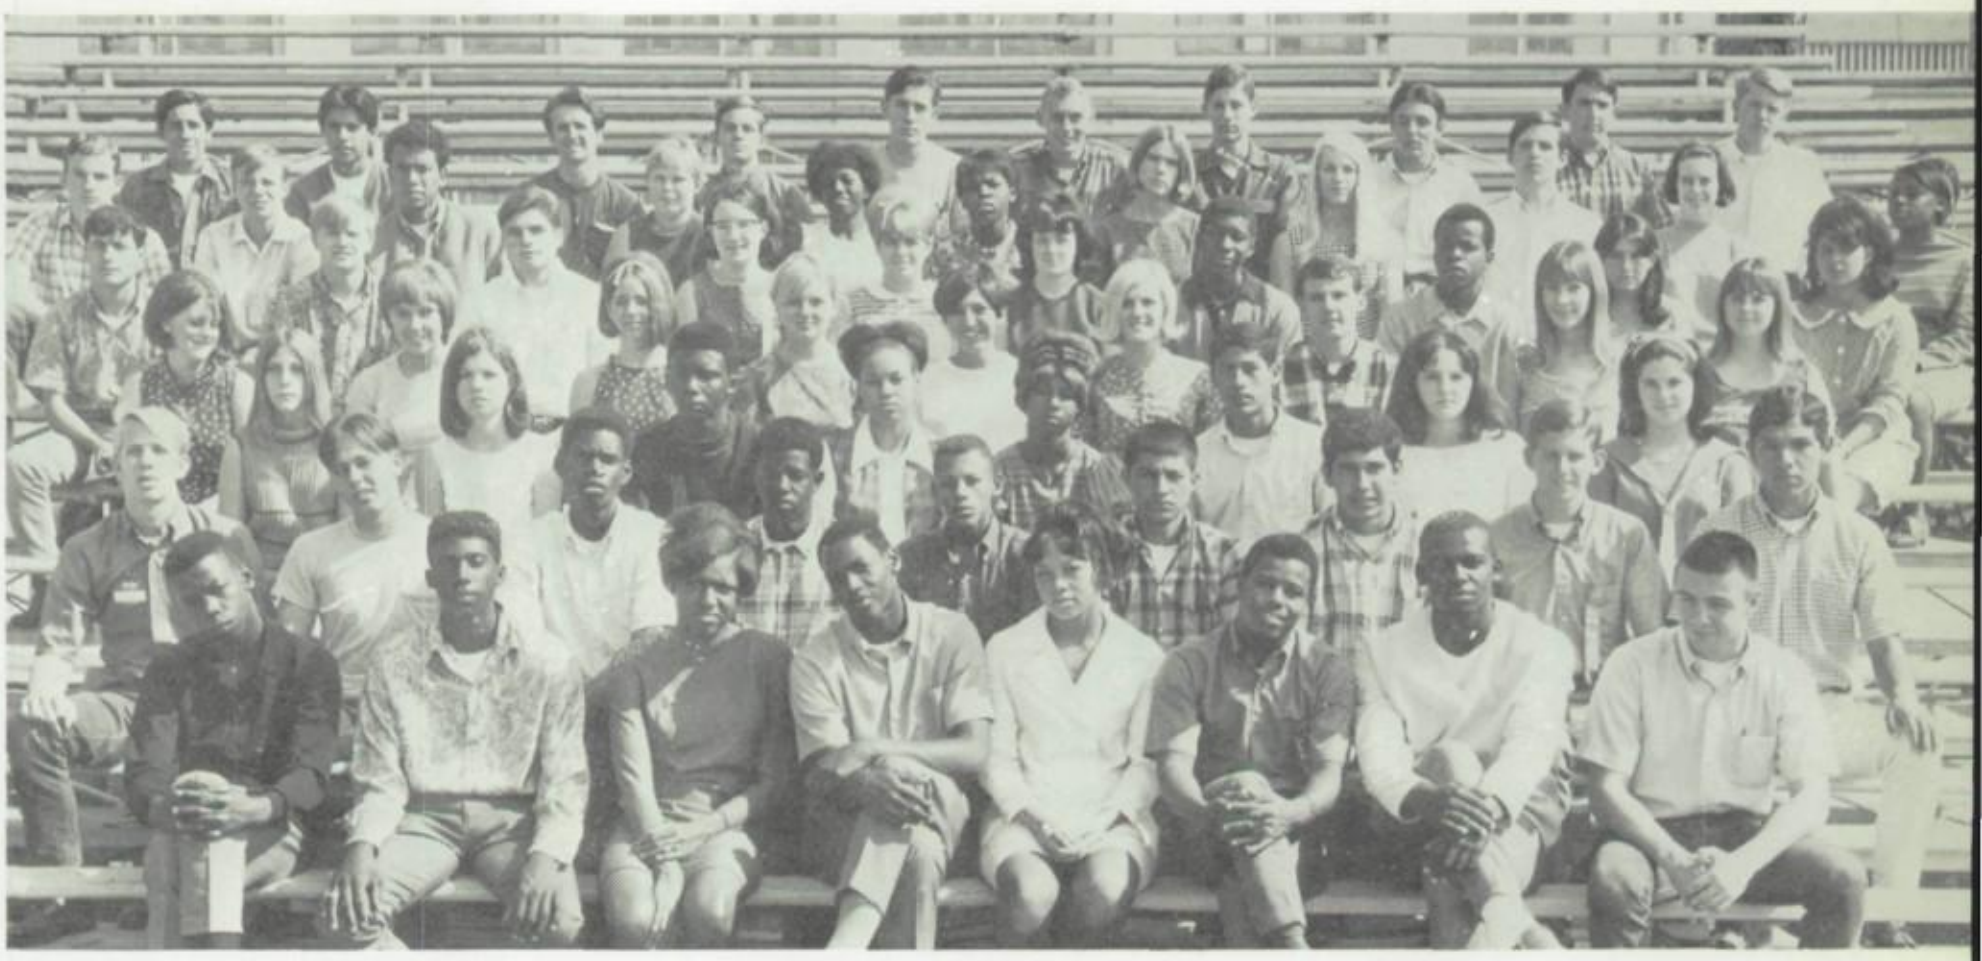

Junior class card stunts spell out greetings to viewers on the other side of the football field. At Driller games juniors led class spirit by joining in rooter section activities.

With no appearance of self-consciousness sophomores are costumed in the sometime strange garb seen on the BHS campus. As freshmen, members of the present sophomore class dressed up to represent the fantasy heroes and heroines of Disneyland for the 1967 Prom.

Use of Unity Underlies Success of Sophomores

By the time a student has reached his second year at Bakersfield High School, he has learned the meaning of unity. The Sophomore Class Council discovered that it was only through unity that strength could be attained. The solidarity of spirit that the sophomore council ultimately achieved was the only response to the lack of an activating principle necessary to exert an influence on sophomores as a group. The dilemma was solved through the incorporation of unifying spirit, which enabled the class to function as one and look to future years with a feeling of assurance to achieve significant accomplishments.

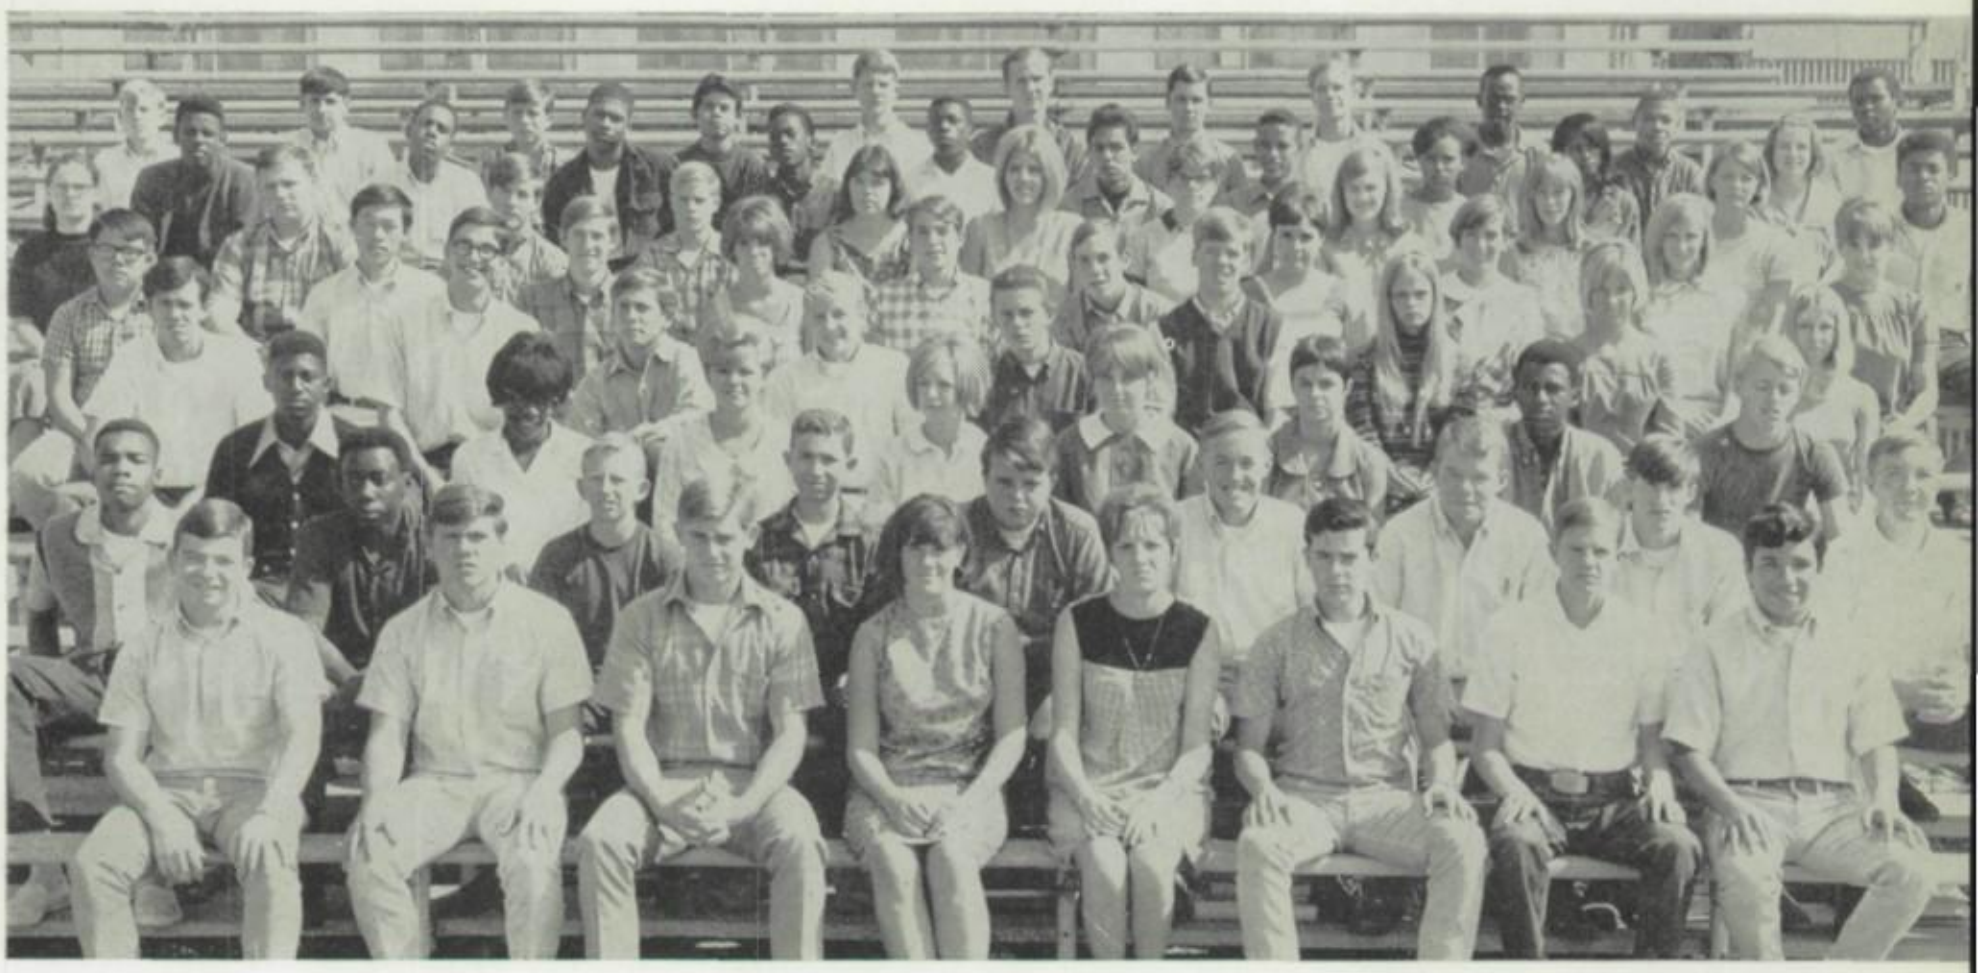

Through unity and action there is strength, says President Terence Choy, as he stresses sophomore spirit to build success in the annual class magazine sale.

From First Framework Freshmen Face Future

The most conscientious freshmen at Bakersfield High School become aware of the existence of class councils sometime during the start of their high school career. Knowing little or nothing about a council's purposes or functions, the most daring and the most ambitious often become a part of the Freshman Class Council. As with any beginning society or association, this year's freshmen found that there were many obstacles to overcome in the running of a successful organization. Foremost on the list of headaches were the problems of leadership, organization, and participation. This year's council, however, eventually acquired the feeling of achievement, as they learned many lessons that will be useful in future endeavors.

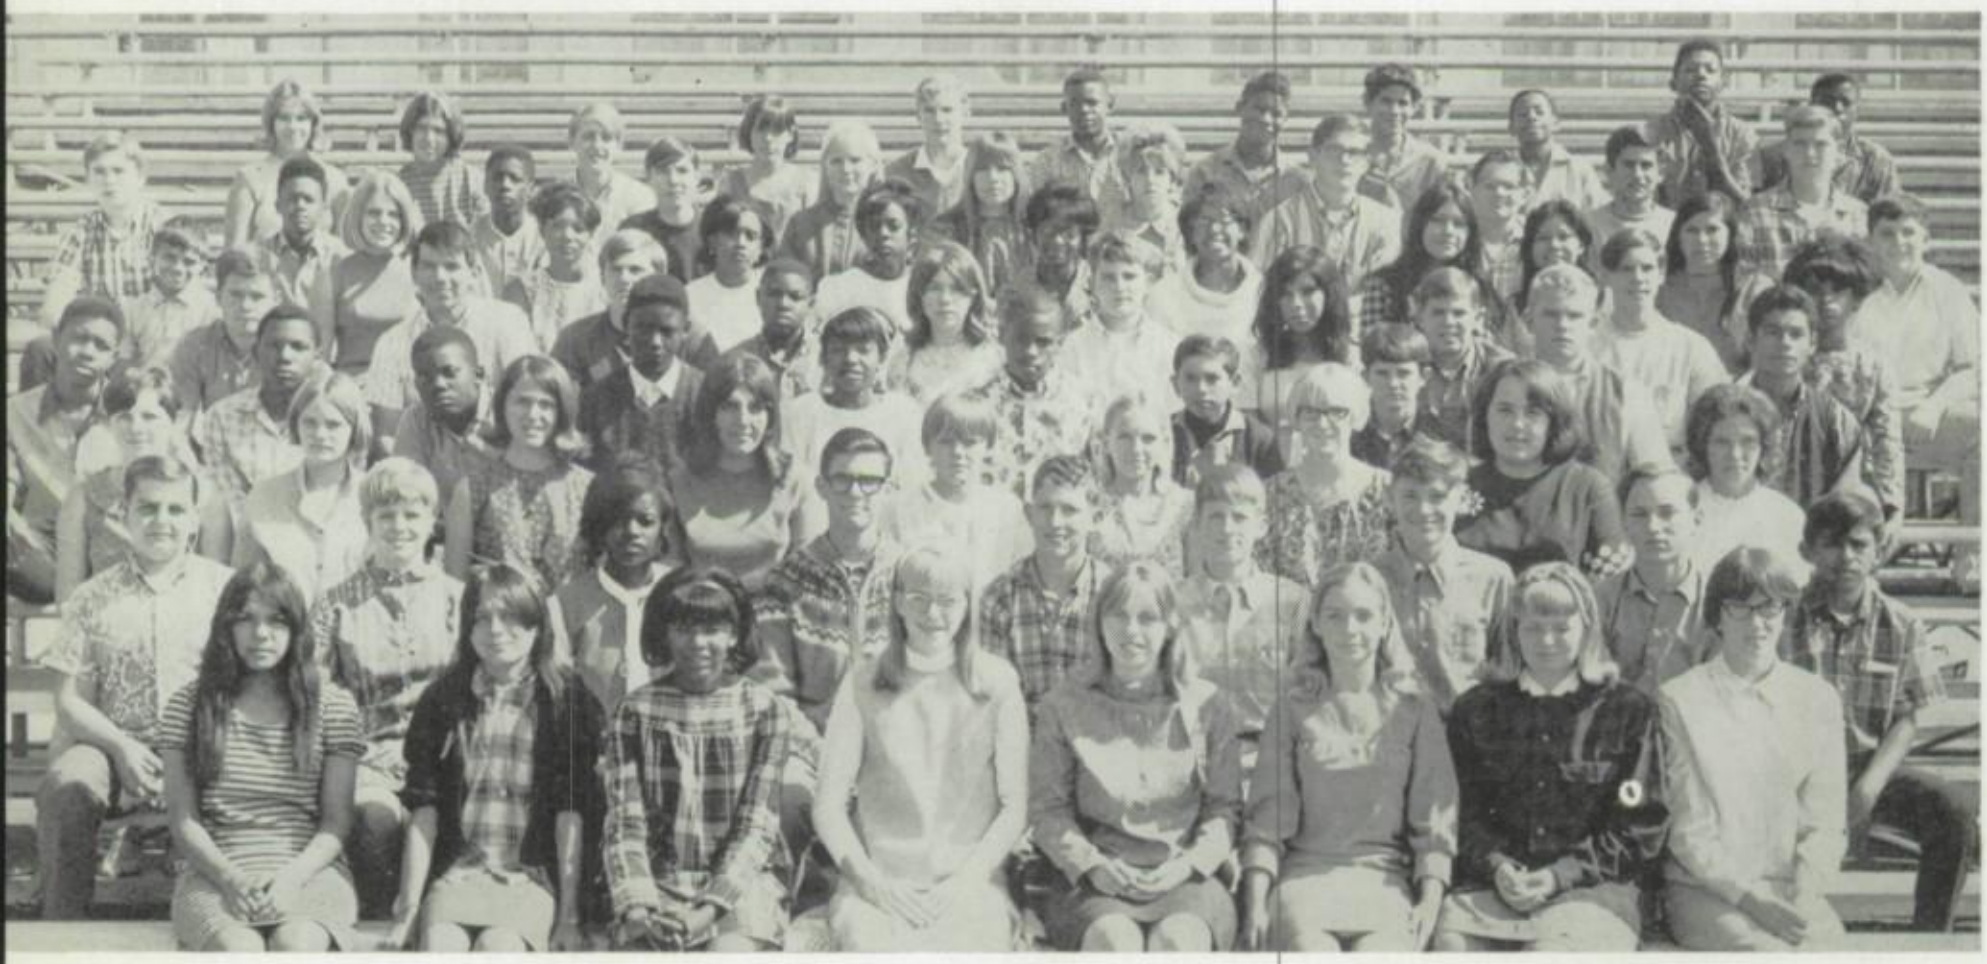

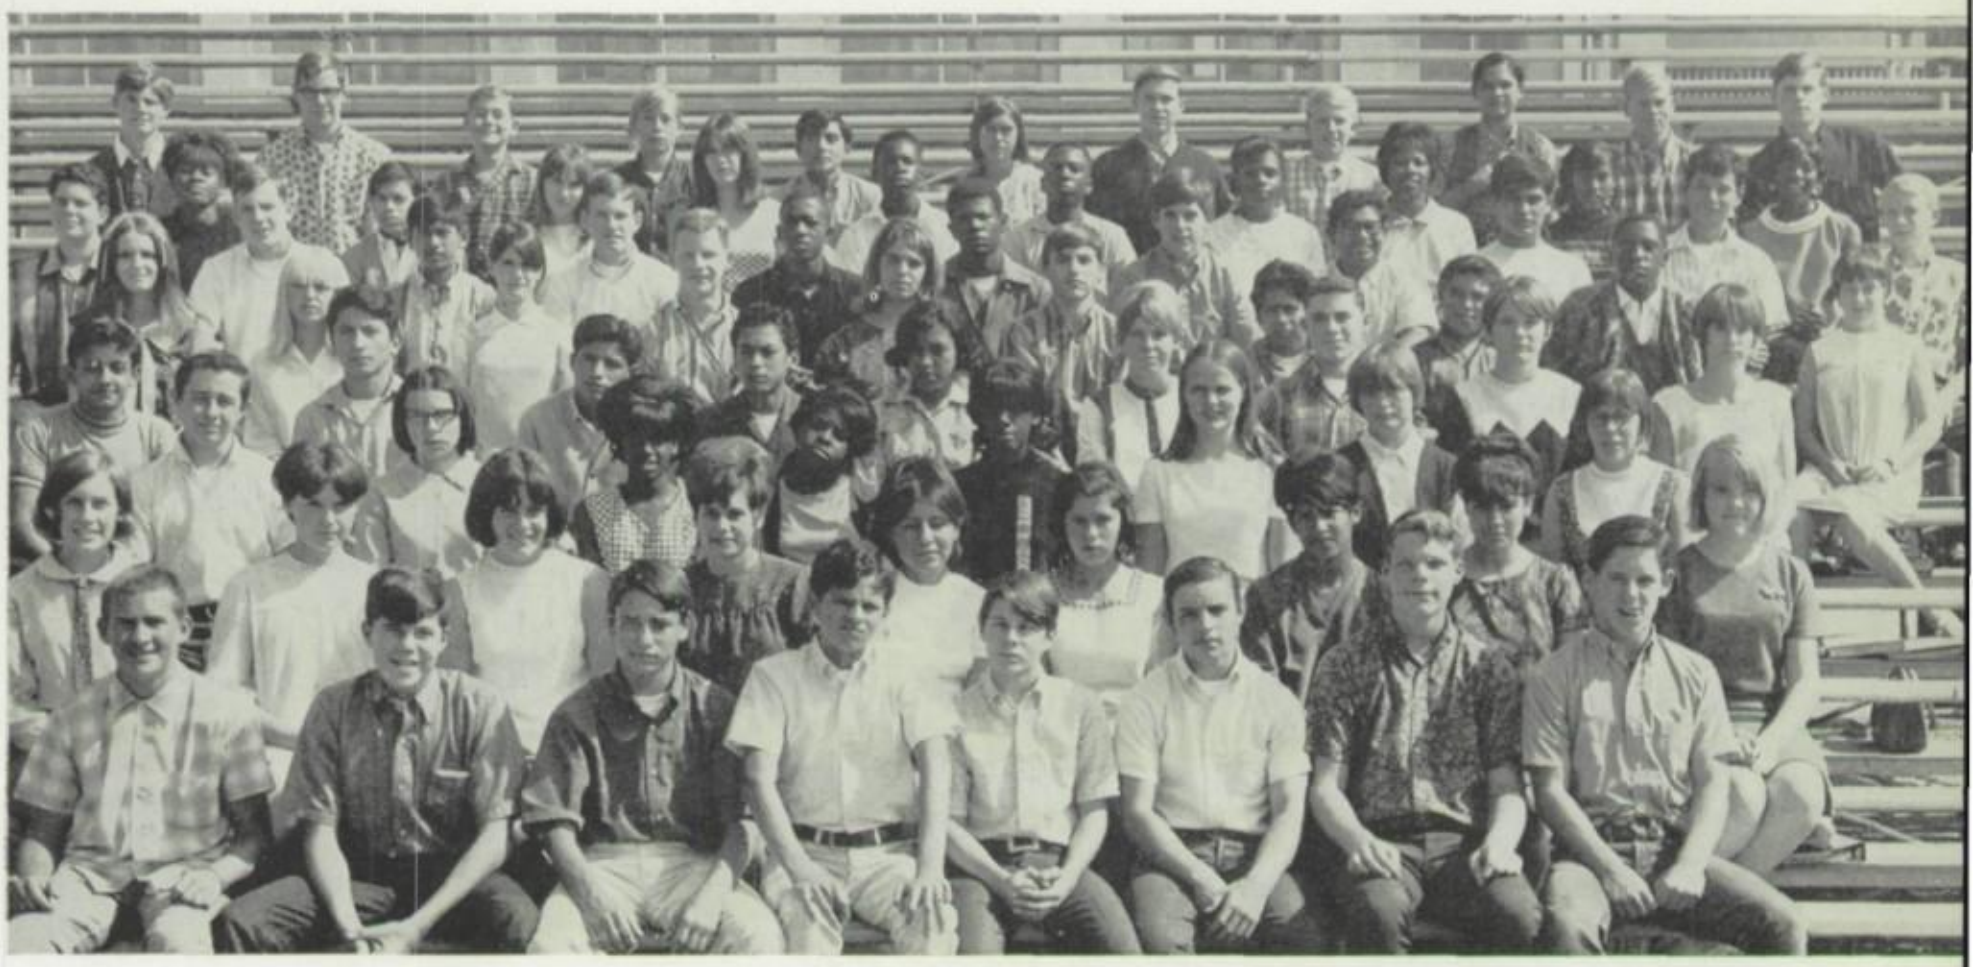

Problems of leadership and participation are apparent to new freshman officers, Becky Bethell and Kathy Rickett, who took over in midyear and tried to increase involvement in class activities.

Student life is the heartbeat of a school. The devotions and interests of all students are manifested in the many dimensions of student life. From classroom to lunchroom, from rallies to dances—all activities in school are characterized by enjoyment and enrichment resulting from the energy and involvement of every student. Bakersfield High School pulsates with the vitality and enthusiasm characteristic of the Driller tradition. In future years the high school experience will become a fond memory of friends, activities, and happenings, all of which are the essence of student life.

Driller Dimension

Cutting across campus on a cold day can be a chore, but there is always the chance to meet a friend, make a date, or be late to class. With the vast wide open spaces of BHS, students quickly get used to the daily journeys of changing classes.

Sitting atop the nearby missile site in Elm Grove, BHS students contemplate the significance of military weapons on campus. The Air Force was invited to display some of its latest missiles to science and industrial arts students, so that they could appreciate the technical knowledge used and the employment opportunities involved in aerospace research and production. The presence of military weapons at BHS evoked ambivalent emotions of patriotic passions for war and humanitarian hopes for peace.

On the Move—Going Places, Doing Things

Standing and waiting to board the bus to Porterville, Driller rooters anticipate the fun, excitement, and good times to come from their trip to see gridiron victory for BHS.

Emerging from the voting booth with ballot in hand, a BHS student makes his choice from among the candidates for Miss BHS. The activities of student life offered opportunities for meaningful participation and involvement in decision-making processes.

Motto for Building Schoo

David Stiles, President

Looking back over this year I think we can agree that it was one of many and varied accomplishments for everyone. Bakersfield High School witnessed a display of spirit of which we can all be proud, while enjoying a year of maximum cooperation. For this I join with the executive board in thanking the student body, the faculty, and the administration. To the executive board, I extend special gratitude for projects ably undertaken and completed in a year well-spent toward fulfilling the goal of a better student government for BHS.

In striving toward our mutual goals, we all grew in stature, individually and collectively. And in remembering this year, we can all take great pride in saying, "We're number 1!" and meaning it.

Danny, Dottie, Yell Leaders Build Driller No. 1 Spirits

Working to boost the level of school spirit, the varsity yell leaders, along with Danny and Dottie Driller, initiated a program to awaken lagging student interest in participation and involvement in school activities. Together they showed the desire to work for the school interest in raising campus pride and spirit to new heights. At sports events and rallies throughout the year the varsity spirit leaders performed well-coordinated, lively routines, as well as adding new and original yells to help boost Driller spirits. Collectively, the yell leaders, Danny Driller, and Dottie Driller helped to create an atmosphere of animation and inspiration in their devotion to build the spirit of "We're No. 1!" in 1967-68.

Driller Crowds Sing Along with Spirited Song Leaders

A concerted effort to improve school spirit characterized the activities of varsity song leaders. As leaders of the traditional school songs, their endeavors to arouse enthusiasm in Driller fans resulted from long hours of strenuous practice in perfection of imaginative, meticulous routines. Poise, personality, and vibrancy were assets that helped to gain the coveted positions as song leaders for these girls, and they continued to show these qualities, with perseverance added, throughout the sports seasons. Through their devotion to raising school pride and spirit the varsity song leaders gained an insight into the meaning of true spirit and the dimensions of its importance as a unifying influence in student life.

Learning to Live Lofty Life as Leaders, Apprentices Aspire to Arouse Spirits

On the field and in the gymnasium the competition of football, basketball, baseball, wrestling, swimming, track, and tennis drew crowds of curious and excited students. Their collective mood of anticipation was funnelled into bursts of spirit, led by the apprentice song and yell leaders. Student spectators found their enthusiasm sparked by the encouragement of the spirit leaders, eagerly attracting noisy sounds of rooting for BHS victories.

The apprentices learned to gauge the disposition of the crowd and attempted to keep spirit running high with their songs and yells. The desire to work at promoting spirit required long hours of practice which they found necessary to perfect their routines. Apprentices also discovered that the job of building student body spirit was quite demanding and entailed much time and effort for success, but they responded with the requisite devotion of energy and enthusiasm in fostering the interests of school pride.

Eager apprentice spirit leaders perform a snappy drill to arouse crowd spirits. At rallies and junior varsity and frosh sports events the spirit of apprentices excited B.H.S. fans tremendously.

Driller Dimensions: Winning Spirit Gives Boos

In dividing their attentions between the crowd and the basketball game, spirit leaders display their ambivalence of enthusiasm and excitement for Driller spirit and success.

The varsity song and yell leaders go through a polished routine intent on arising the Driller spirit. The mood of enthusiasm generated at rallies carried over into the excitement at evening football contests.

to Team Success

Loud, louder, loudest—that's the noisy sound of Drillers cheering at a gym rally. Expressions of desire appeared on the faces of incensed rooters who tried to out-yell others at the rally and later at the game.

Adding to the hilarity of the first rally of the football season, members of S.R.A. try to keep in step as they imitate the Driller Dragon. The Driller "Dragon Defense" kept in step very well in leading B.H.S. to nine gridiron victories in 1967.

Students go to the polls during EB Week to select Miss BHS. The traditional election supplied one among many focal points of the "Beat EB Week" festivities.

At the EB-BHS exchange rally, student body president David Stiles predicts a Driller victory over rival East High. Later that evening Stiles' forecast proved to be prophetic.

Cross-town Rivalr

Imitating the EB Blades, the spirit leaders arouse som loud Driller cheering at the exchange rally. But the hig spirits of EB Week were climaxed by the Friday nigh football game at Memorial Stadium.

Swinging around left end, halfback Theron Brown gets a block, sees the opening, and is on his way to a big gain. The Drillers overwhelmed EB, 35-13, on their way to an undefeated season as valley champions.

rings Out Best of BHS During "Beat EB Week"

Intense rivalry and fierce competition marked by traditional excitement and enthusiasm ushers in the annual "Beat EB Week." Five days of frenzy culminates as the two schools send their teams to do battle on the gridiron. Football enemies for 26 years, the rival schools prepare for days in advance in anticipation of a hard-fought contest. Highlighting EB Week and providing extra excitement at the game is the announcement of the girl chosen as Miss BHS. On game day an exchange rally with EB heightens Driller spirit for the planned conquest of the archnemesis. During EB Week with its various activities, student devotion to school tradition and spirit is raised to its highest peak of intensity during the year.

Crowning Choice amon

The coed chosen Miss BHS holds a title of distinction, honor, and responsibility. Selection as Miss BHS represents an award of distinction for service in school, spirit in activities, and attractiveness in appearance. Being chosen Miss BHS carries with it the honor of student esteem gained through victory in two general elections. Participation in various activities on and off campus comprises the responsibility that being Miss BHS requires.

Chosen as part of the annual "Beat EB Week" festivities, Miss BHS goes through a series of eliminations before reaching the pinnacle when her name is announced at half-time of the EB football game. After receiving a bouquet of roses, a year of happy involvement in all dimensions of school life follows for the girl who is Miss BHS.

Stevie Actis receives a congratulatory kiss from ASB president David Stiles, after her name was announced as the selection for Miss BHS of 1967-68.

Dorthea Poloynis, Carnival Queen

Ranking Royalty Reigns over Campus Citizenry

Maintaining a tradition of selecting royalty from among the rank and file, students honor four attractive coeds as campus queens. In joining the roster of regal splendor, each is chosen for special recognition at various times during the year. In autumn, participation in the Football Carnival supplies the reason for royalty to reign over the first football contest of the year. During the cold of the winter, young men's fancies rest upon success at specialized indoor sports; those who choose the top of the cool coed crop are the noted sportsmen of Block B and Circle B. In springtime when femininity is in full bloom, Miss Typical Coed, the ideal girl student at BHS, is heralded by dancing celebrants of the rites of spring. Through the dimensions of changing seasons a pretty girl remains a pretty girl.

Reigning over the Football Carnival, Queen Dorothea Poloynis occupies a place of distinction among Driller spectators of the gridiron competition.

Kathy Gillespie beams with joy and happiness upon being chosen as Circle B Queen at their winter dance festivities.

Receiving a friendly congratulatory kiss, Terri McNamara gains recognition as the select Queen of Block B.

Finding friends at a delightful dance can commence a romantic relationship for a destined duo. This could be the start of something.

Set aglow by season spirits and dimmed candle light, dancing couples enjoy the romantic setting and mood of the IRC Christmas Formal.

Delights of Dance Present Pleasures of Pursuit

In an aura of amplified animation dancers do what comes naturally, which varies vicariously depending directly upon the complex circumstances of picking partners.

The beat goes on at an after-game dance, as couples vibrate to the electronic pulse of sound that transcends musical expression into mind expansion.

In an atmosphere of crowded confusion enjoyably entranced couples cling closely, obviously oblivious to chaotic conditions as they match movements to the mood music.

This year at Bakersfield High School has been the most rewarding experience that I have ever had. Things like school spirit, football games, rallies, and donkey basketball were completely unknown to me when I came to this country. I feel very fortunate to have come to a school like BHS, a school which not only rated number one in football games but also in amount of school spirit shown by the student body. I hope that this will continue in times to come. Students have been very friendly to me; whenever I am lost, all I have to do is ask, and someone will gladly help me. These are things I will remember.

oreign Students Learn American Life—BHS Style

Living in the United States has been one of the greatest experiences of my life. When I first came here I found that many things were going to be very different than home. My classes seem easier here, and there are fewer subjects—although the language makes things more difficult. Kids and teachers are very friendly, and they help me in everything I need. BHS has a lot of extra-curricular activities, and football is great. Another thing that impresses me very much is the great school spirit; I would like to start a spirit program in Chile when I go back. It seems like lots of fun!

Alicia Ricke

I think Bakersfield High School is great—the number one groovy school. I appreciate the kindness with which I have been treated by the faculty as well as the students and all the other people I have met. To me the United States is a wonderful country, and my experiences in California make me feel as if this is my second home. I also liked the American way of life, California's natural beauty, Bakersfield's hot and clear weather, and last, but not least, the delicious food—especially hamburgers. I enjoyed my stay at BHS, and I would like to thank all who made this year so wonderful for me.

From its position atop the student store in the quad, the marquee proclaims the news of the week in a convenient manner, serving many organizations by publicizing important events and activities.

Senior Gifts from Past Give Memories to Presen

As the senior class dedicates a gift to Bakersfield High School it expresses the spirit of gratitude and appreciation for four memorable years of learning and experience. The Driller seal, symbol of B. H. S., is impressed on school ground as in the minds and hearts of students and alumni. A map of the school, made of blue and white tiles, provides a distinctive guide to building locations, while the marquee above the student store heralds announcements of sports, social, and scholastic events. Year after year Driller victories are recorded on the scoreboard at Griffith Field, while the clock in the quad records time forever in movement forward. These senior gifts and many others are the dimensions of students devotion to their alma mater and what it has symbolized over the years.

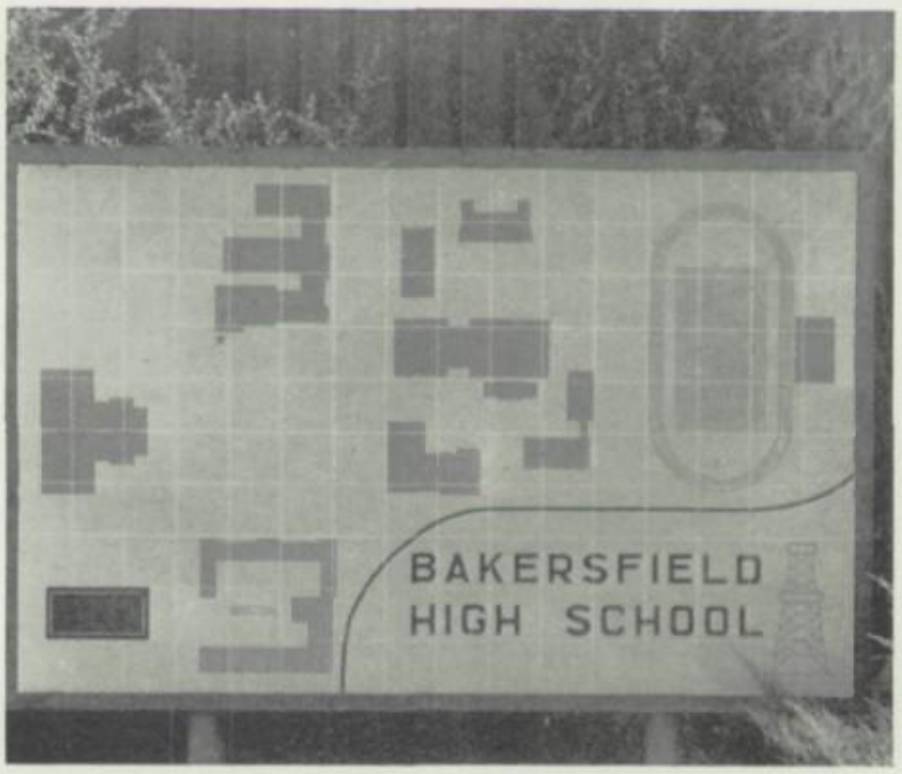

Located at the north end of Griffith Field, the electric scoreboard records Driller superiority in athletics, as it has through many years of operation.

nd Thoughts to Future

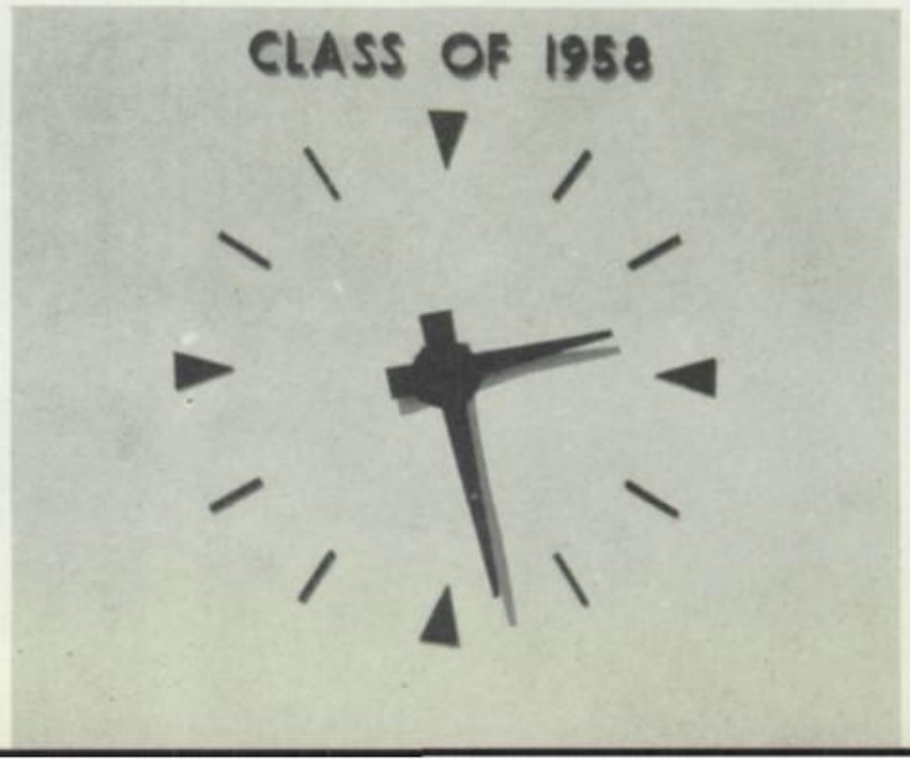

A clasp of hands symbolizing the cooperation of school and community represents Bakersfield High School in its seal, embossed in the foreground of the Administration Building.

In the front of the Administration Building a mosaic blue and white map provides a unique guide to building locations on the BHS campus.

With the ever-moving tides of time advancing, the hands of the clock in the quad pass through the minutes and hours that form years of BHS history.

"All the World's A Stage" with BHS Student

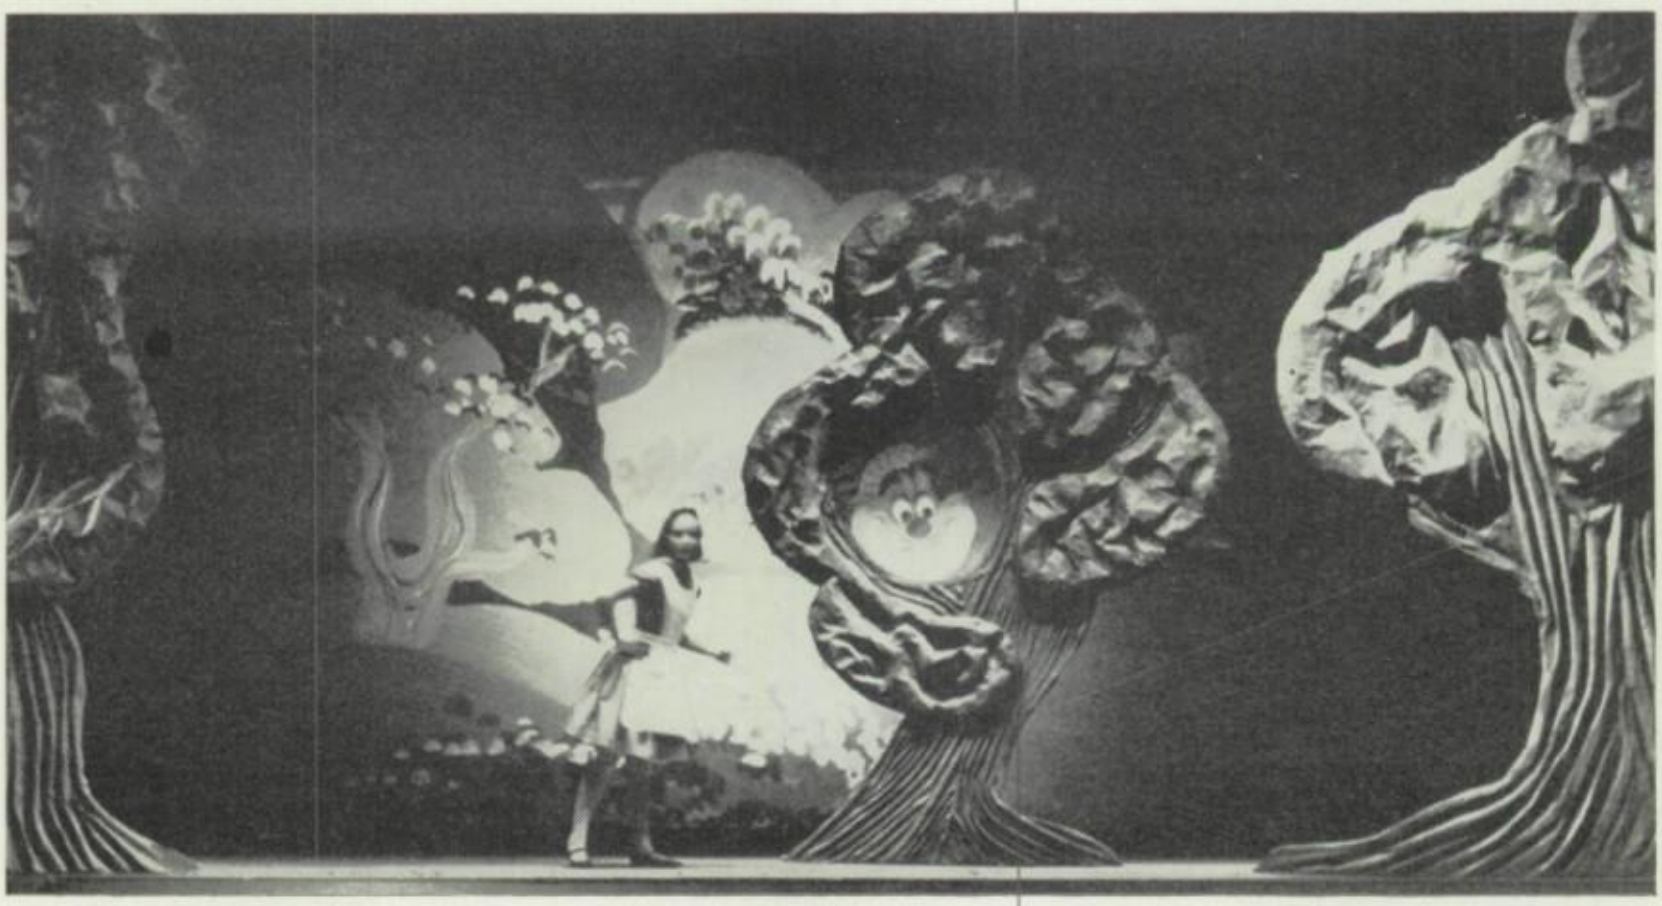

An after dinner chat between Alda and Baron Cesarea enlivens the mood of the evening before death enters the scene. The senior play exposed the talents of several members of the graduating class.

On her venture into the dream world of Wonderland, Alice encounters some unimaginable characters—Mad Hatter, Caterpillar, March Hare, White Rabbit. She is surprised, shocked, and amazed by them, as they are by her.

Puzzled by the on-again off-again appearance and disappearance of the Cheshire Cat, Alice wanders through Wonderland in a web of wonderment.

Performing the Roles

The parting curtains reveal the stage for dimensions of dramatic experience to actors and audiences alike. A season of play began with the fall presentation of "Death Takes a Holiday", in which seniors joined together to produce a bizarre tale of Death; released temporarily from his sordid occupation, Death pursued earthly passions much to his dismay. A Christmas extravaganza is a regular BHS happening; "The Nutcracker Suite" presented the spirit and mood to set the holiday season aglow with happiness. The year's finale, "Alice in Wonderland," offered opportunities for impressive achievements in technical inventiveness and dramatic depiction; Alice wandered through a widly imaginative dream world, creating a duality of interpretation—fantasy adventure for children and psychedelic food for thought. "The play's the thing . . ." wherein to catch the conscience of the audience—apologies to Shakespeare, that is the devotion of drama.

The somber illusion of death, draped in a cape of immortality, visits the earthly world to learn about life, in the production "Death Takes a Holiday." Discovering that living surpasses dying, death longed to reside among the living, but he was forced to return.

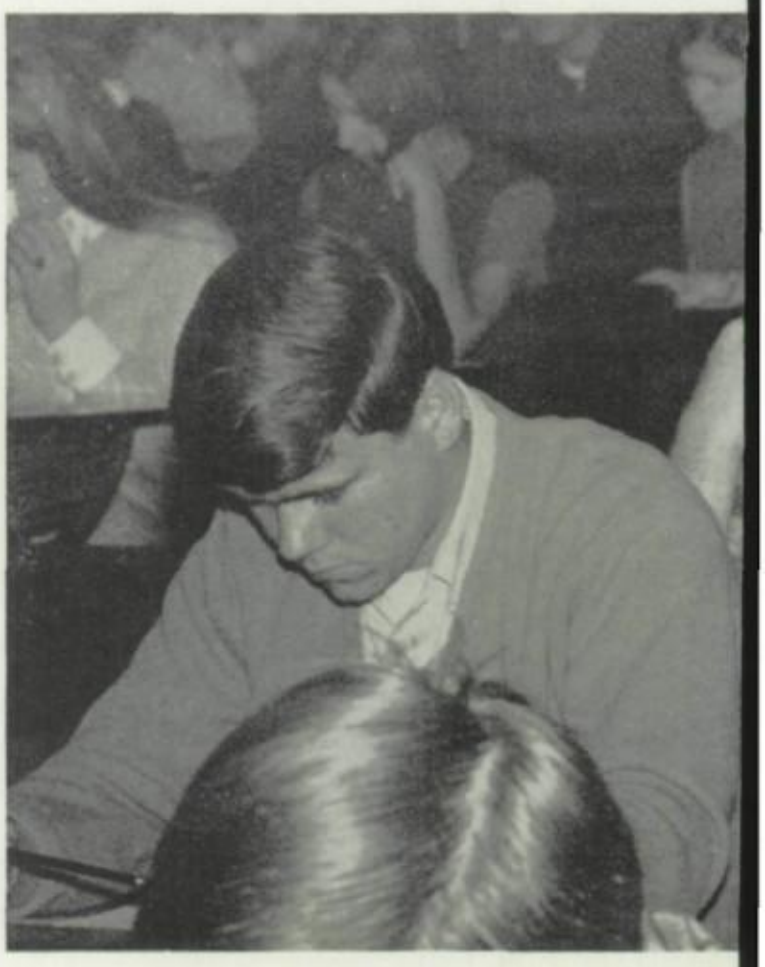

Looking up at the crowd, Danny and Dottie Driller anticipate the reaction to a BHS cheer for victory. The reward of spirit showed in student body pride arising from the Driller football success of 1967.

Addressing half-awake students at the North High Breakfast Rally, Coach Briggs supplies his own brand of spirit raising early in the morning. At the field that night the Briggs-inspired team and rooters performed the football plays and spirit acts to bring victory to BHS.

Driller Dimension

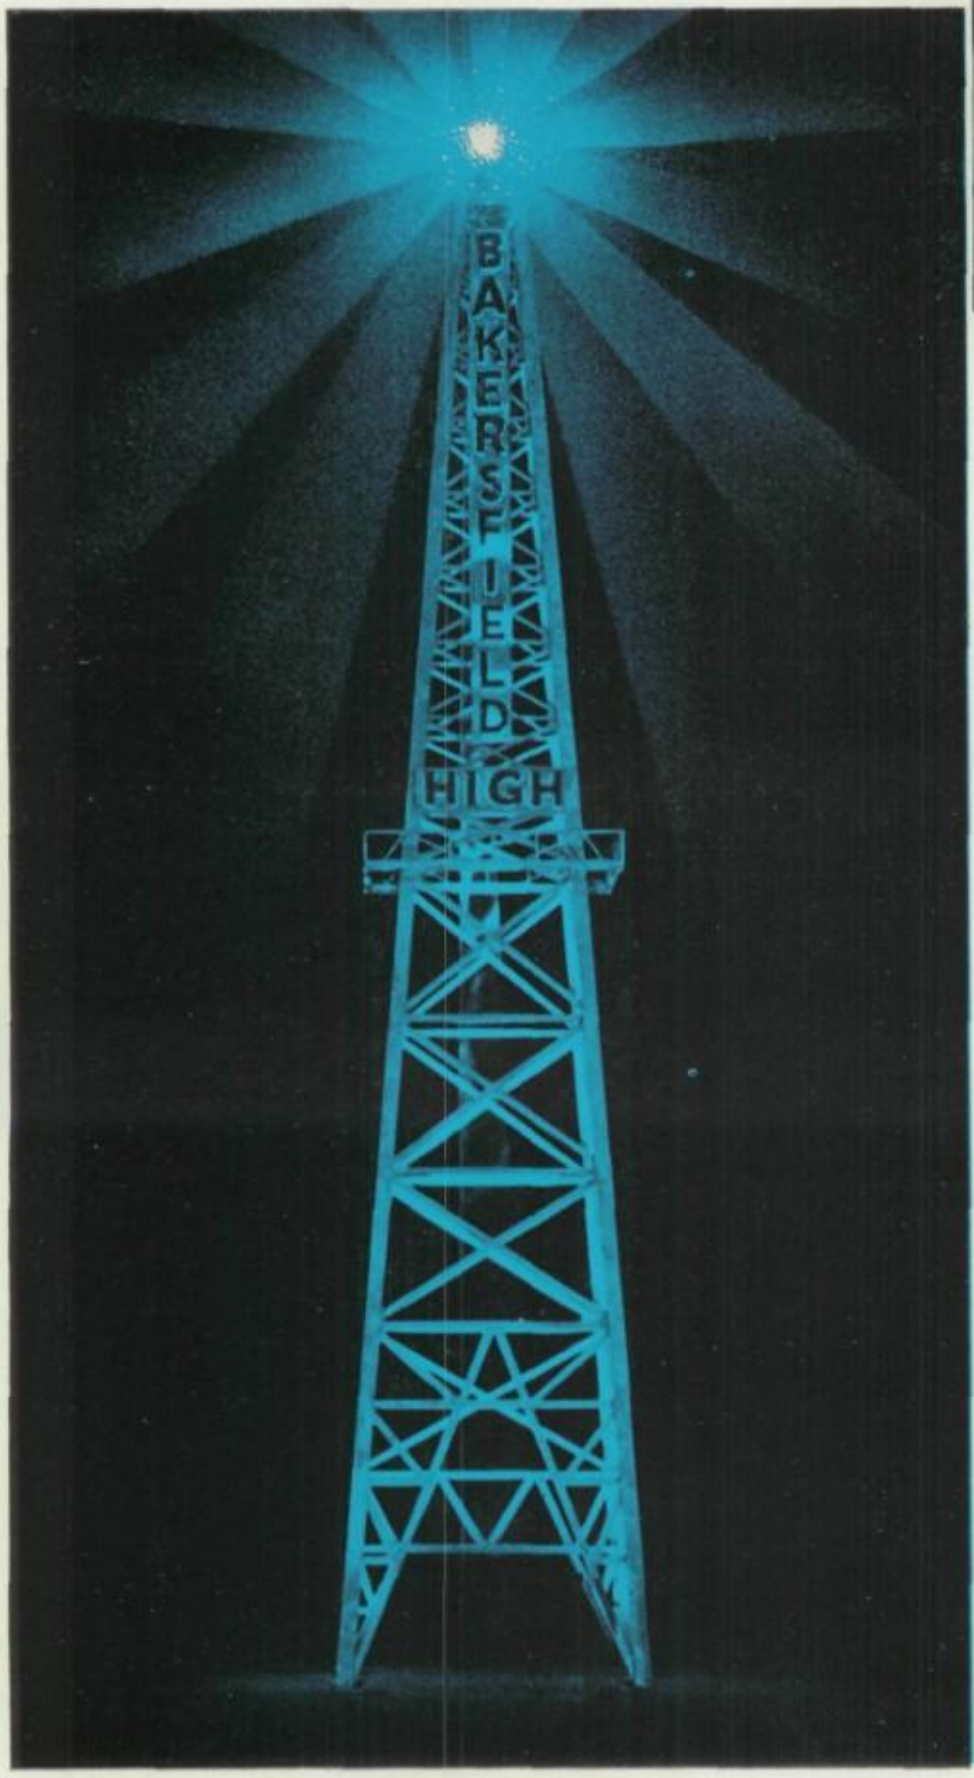

The typical, old-fashioned family gathering at Christmas time unfolds into the fantasy of the "Nutcracker Suite." Members of the fine arts department performed the Tchaikovsky tale for school and community audiences.

Performance in Spirit, Entertainment, Academics

Searching for answers, students concentrate deeply as they attempt to perform to their utmost ability in the group testing program. Expressions of thoughtful apprehension and anxiety are visual proof of students' desires to succeed.

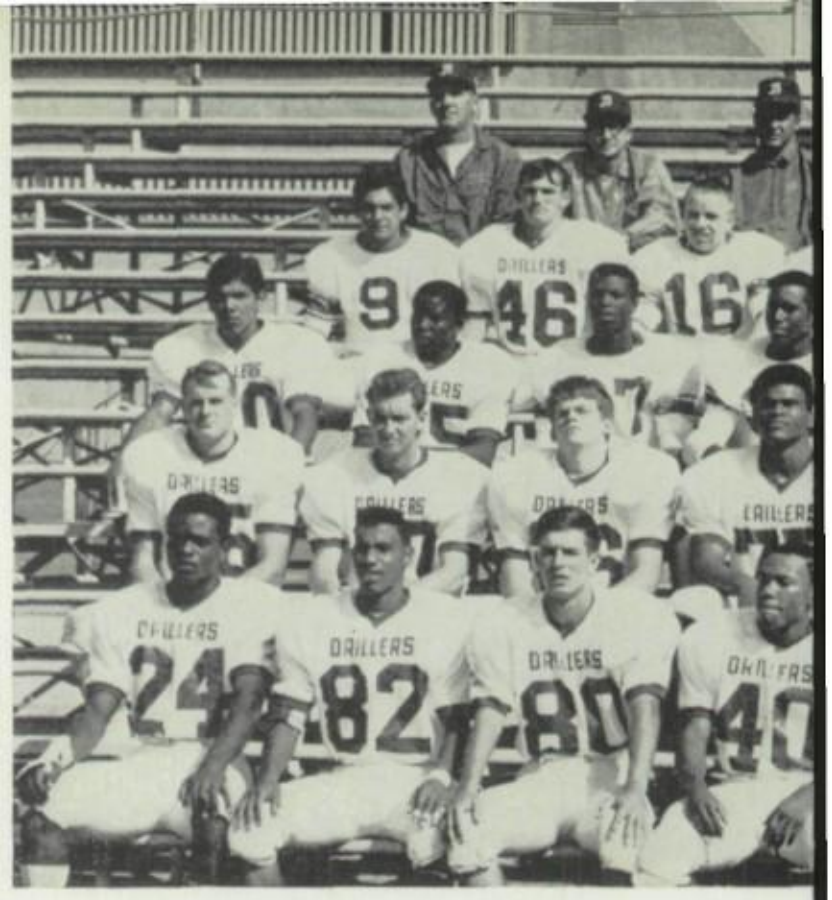

Athletics present the challenge of competition while offering the glory of achievement. The significance of devotion is evident in athletic competition as in no other dimension of school life. Learning to never give up, to always put forth maximum effort, to continuously strive for improvement are emotions etched in the determination of every athlete devoted to team success. Because life is essentially a struggle between winning and losing, the devotion to achievement required of all athletes will serve to make life and its endeavors more meaningful to those with experiences in athletic competition.

Drillers Rate as Champ

The 1967 Drillers were the pride of BHS as they defeated all but one opponent in capturing the city, league, and valley championships with a fantastic 9-0-1 record. The team was outstanding offensively and defensively. The "Dragon Defense" was anchored by three All-City players including rover-linebacker Jeff Siemon, top defensive player in the city, tackle Albert Phillips, and halfback Dale McDowell. The "Go-Blue Offense" revolved around quarterback Phil Tumblin and All-City players, guard Gary Watson and halfback Theron Brown, top offensive player in the city.

During the season the Drillers met stiff competition in three crucial encounters. Triumph over North High, last year's city and league champs, was probably the most gratifying win of the season; with the score tied 7-7 in the fourth quarter Siemon's clutch interception and Brown's dazzling touchdown run made victory climatically sweet and sure. In the league finale against arch-nemesis Foothill High the Drillers trailed by 13 late in the fourth quarter but were able to pull off some last minute excitement to earn a 13-13 tie. For the valley championship the Drillers defeated Tulare High 26-14, coasting to victory with a devastating ground attack and rugged defensive play. The season concluded triumphantly as the mighty Drillers were presented with the valley championship trophy, culminating a season of devotion to prove that "We're No. 1!"

In the valley championship game Dick Cook races out of the reach of pursuing Tulare linemen. The Driller running attack hampered the enemy throughout the game and was the decisive factor in the Driller triumph.

It's not always easy going for Driller runners, as Bob Slaughter finds out while being racked up by the San Marcos defense.

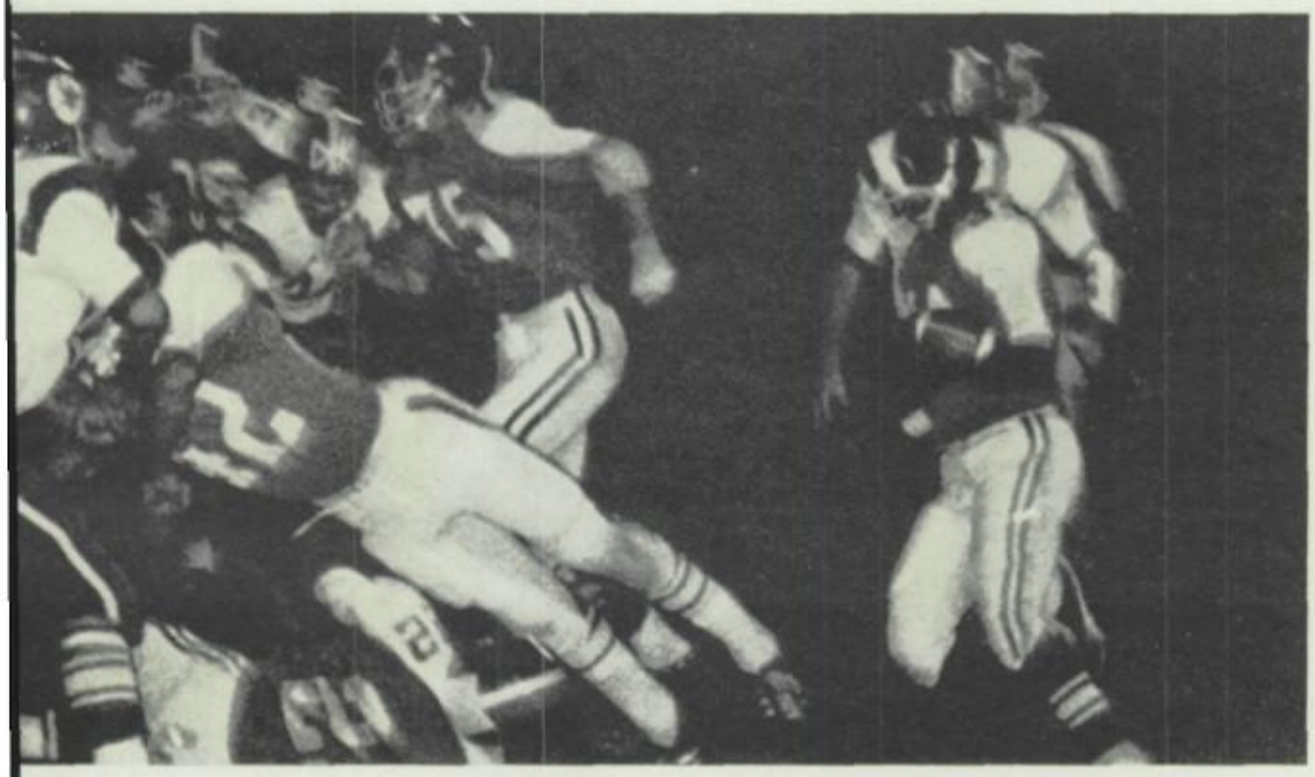

Wide open receiver Mark Cornwall latches onto a pass for an important gain in the defeat of EB. Driller passing was not awesome but proved to be a surprising threat in key situations.

Filled with pride and satisfaction, Coach Briggs and his players are presented the valley championship award by Gil Bishop, Director of Athletics at Bakersfield College. Months of devotion to a game and to a team were culminated by this moment of triumph—a moment witnessed by an ecstatic student body at Memorial Stadium just after the championship game with Tulare.

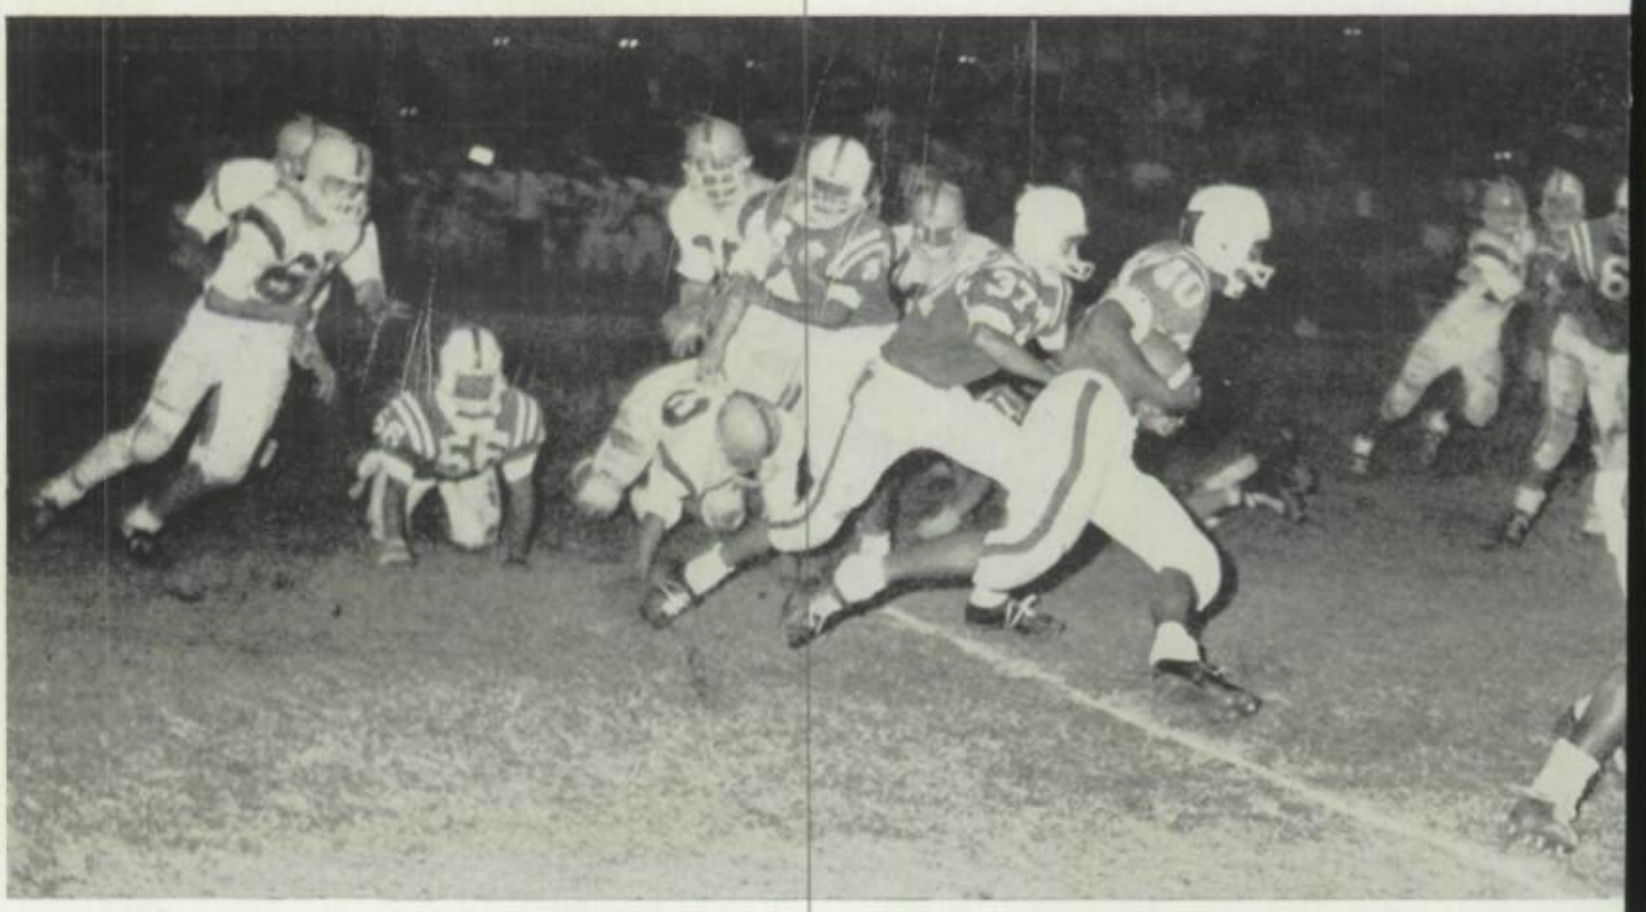

Clearing the way for Theron Brown, the hard-hitting Driller offensive line opens a hole in the stalwart North defense. Later in the game Brown galloped 35 yards and scored the winning touchdown on a similar run up the middle.

Sandab linemen open a big hole in the West defense, as Charles Moore streaks through for an impressive gain. However, outstanding plays did not come often enough to insure Sandab victory.

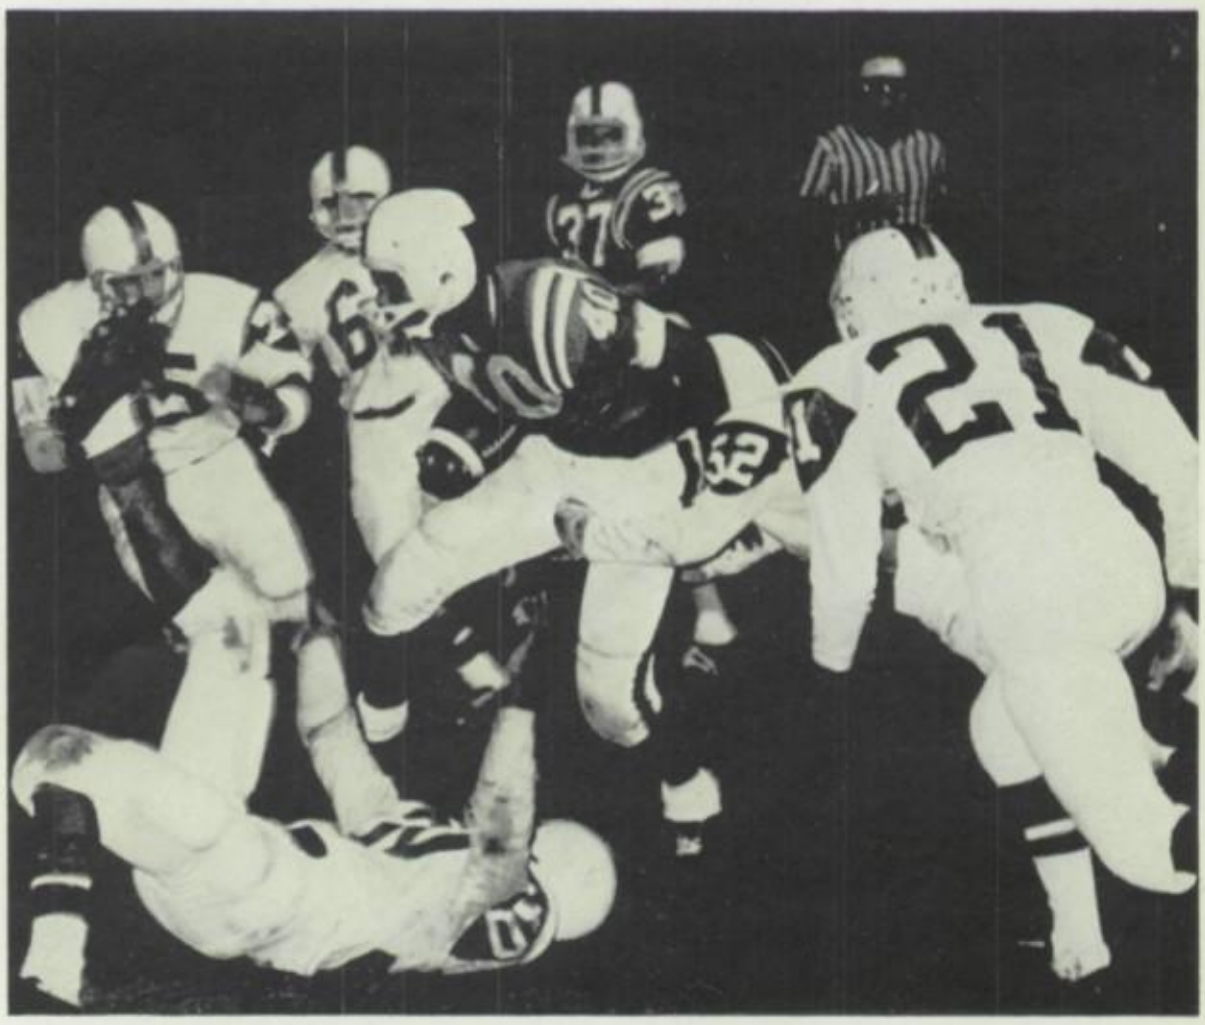

Setbacks while Straining for Success

For the Sandabs, 1967 proved to be a disappointing year as they compiled a mediocre 3-5-1 record. After opening the season with consecutive victories over North High and McFarland High, the Sandabs were able to capture but one win in their remaining contests. In most of their games the Sandabs played well in the early going, often holding a lead at half-time, but after intermission their apparent lack of depth and momentum allowed opponents to overcome the halftime advantage.

Highlighting the lackluster Sandab season was the outstanding offensive and defensive play of halfback Vernell Jackson, fullback Greg Cannon, tackle Darryl Martin, and end Pete Flores, who also served as team captain. Despite a losing record the Sandab team reflected the devotion of time, energy, and emotion in its efforts to succeed.

From all directions Charles Moore finds himself surrounded by San Marcos defenders. Frustration seemed to characterize the Sandab determination to achieve success.

Young Bits Learn from Experience Glory of Victory

Comprised mainly of freshmen with a few sophomores mixed in, the Bits of 1967 achieved a creditable 4-4-0 record for a third place league finish. The virtually inexperienced C Class team started the season slowly with two non-league defeats to Taft High and Delano High before beating Porterville High in their final pre-league contest. Against league opponents the Bits fared well in their first two encounters, defeating West High and North High, followed by consecutive losses to East High and South High; the season ended with the Bits rolling up their largest score of the year in conquering Foothill High.

The Bits' success in 1967 stemmed from the playing ability of key team members including quarterback Bruce Kroeker, fullback Louis Wright, halfback Jon Crosby, end Ernie Sanchez, and tackle Mike Stoddard. The skill and confidence gained by each player represented the devotion to succeed in someday becoming a member of the Driller team.

Meeting opposition head-on, Dave Tucker comes down in the grasp of a Foothill defensive man. Bits' fortunes prevailed in winning the season's finale.

"... the Greatest Wrestlers in California"

The "We're No. 1!" label applied appropriately to the phenomenal success of the 1968 Driller wrestling team. Among their accomplishments were championships in six major tournaments, including Antelope Valley, Bakersfield College, Fresno State, SYL, Southern Divisional, and CIF—Central Section. Not only was the Driller team able to win these tournaments, but they also set new all-time scoring records in each one. Capping a year of great feats, BHS squad scored a record number of points in earning the valley championship award.

Leading the Driller onslaught were five valley champions: Tony Serros—95 lbs., Bill Herrera—103 lbs., Mark Lawrence—120 lbs., Rich Alvarez—165 lbs., and team captain Walt Shepard—175 lbs. Above the wrestling locker room door the slogan, "Through these doors pass the greatest wrestlers in California," proved not only to be inspirational, but factual as well. The 1968 Driller squad earned with intense devotion its place as the greatest wrestling team in BHS history.

Driller Victories Outnumber Defeats, but Second-Best Rank Limits Success

Encountering some of the finest competition in California, the 1967-1968 Driller basketball team compiled a respectable 13-10 record. In SYL action the Drillers attained second place behind league and valley champions, East High.

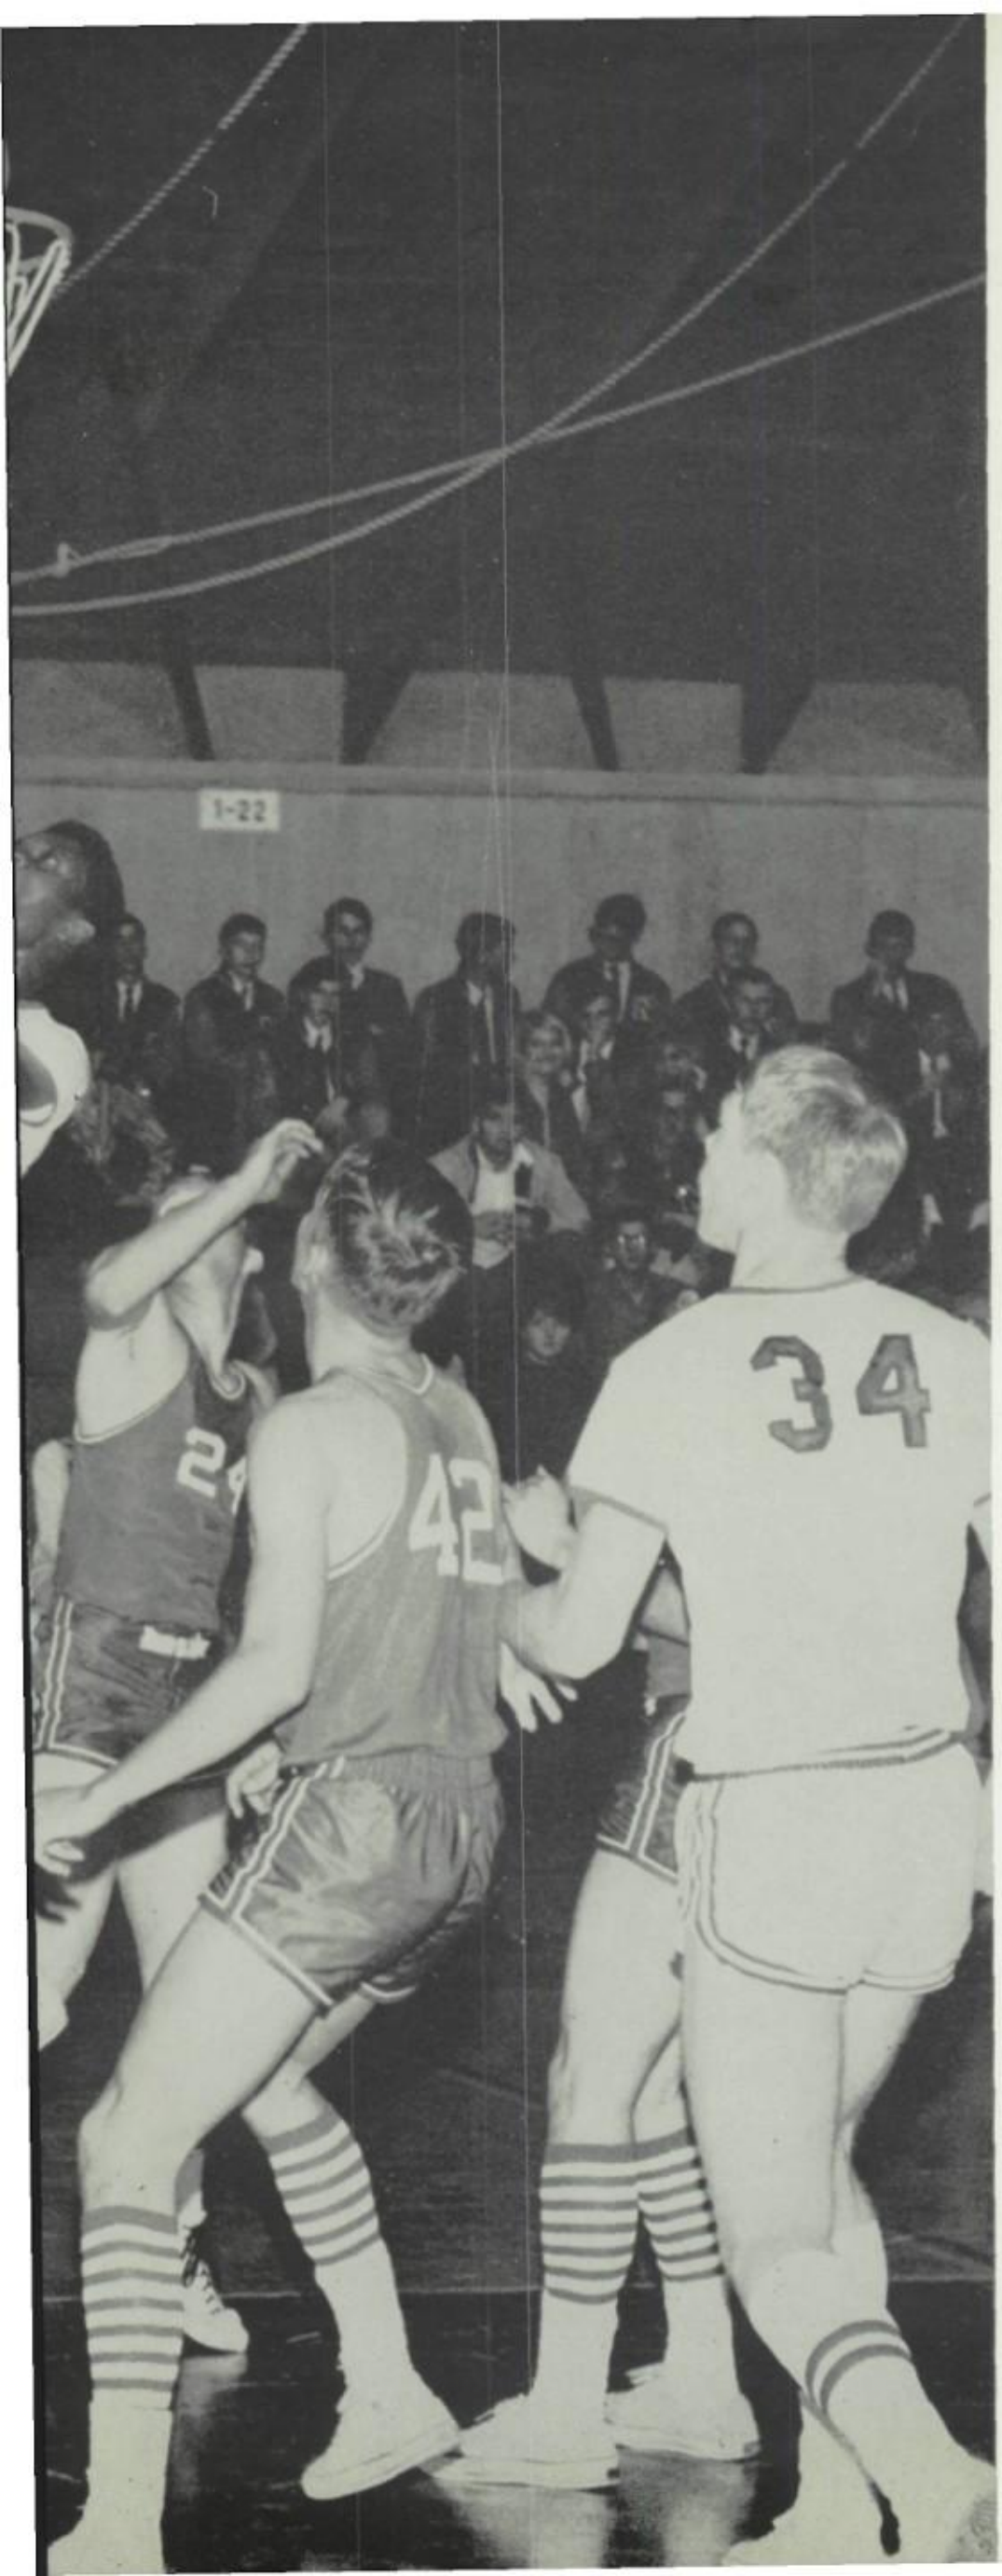

Opening the season in Fresno for the McLane Tournament, the Drillers defeated Sierra High but lost to Berkeley High and McLane High for fourth place. During Christmas vacation the BHS varsity competed in two tournaments at Bakersfield College and at Fillmore High; in both contests the Drillers captured second place, falling to East High at BC and John Burroughs High of Burbank at Fillmore.

In SYL competition the Drillers were unphased by league contenders in defeating all but two schools for a 6-4 record. Against the championship East High squad, the Drillers were the only local team to threaten the Blades' supremacy; the Drillers also sustained two heart-breaking one-point overtime losses to West High.

Leading the Driller squad were two all-league players, guard Theron Brown and center Kim Stockton, while forwards Wayne Burris and Jeff Siemon received all-league honorable mention. The 1967-68 Drillers were a well-balanced, highly-skilled, avidly devoted group of players working together to achieve team success and personal satisfaction.

Sandab forward John Webster drives between two defensive men to put a shot against West High. In league play the Sandabs were able to split a pair of games with the West team.

Encountering a season of frustration the Sandab basketball team won only eight in their 19-game season. The squad went through pre-league action with a mediocre 4-5 record, but in tournament play the Sandabs failed to make a showing. Opening SYL league play the Sandabs scored three consecutive victories and were considered favorites for league championship. Disaster then struck as the B class team tumbled to six straight defeats before adding their final win for a disappointing fourth place finish in league standings.

The Sandabs were led by center Bruce Albert, top scorer and rebounder, assisted by forwards Daryl Martin and John Webster. In the backcourt Rich Romo and Joe Cornejo were leading playmakers, aided in relief by Curtis Nicholas. Devotion to success was foremost in all team efforts despite disappointment and frustration.

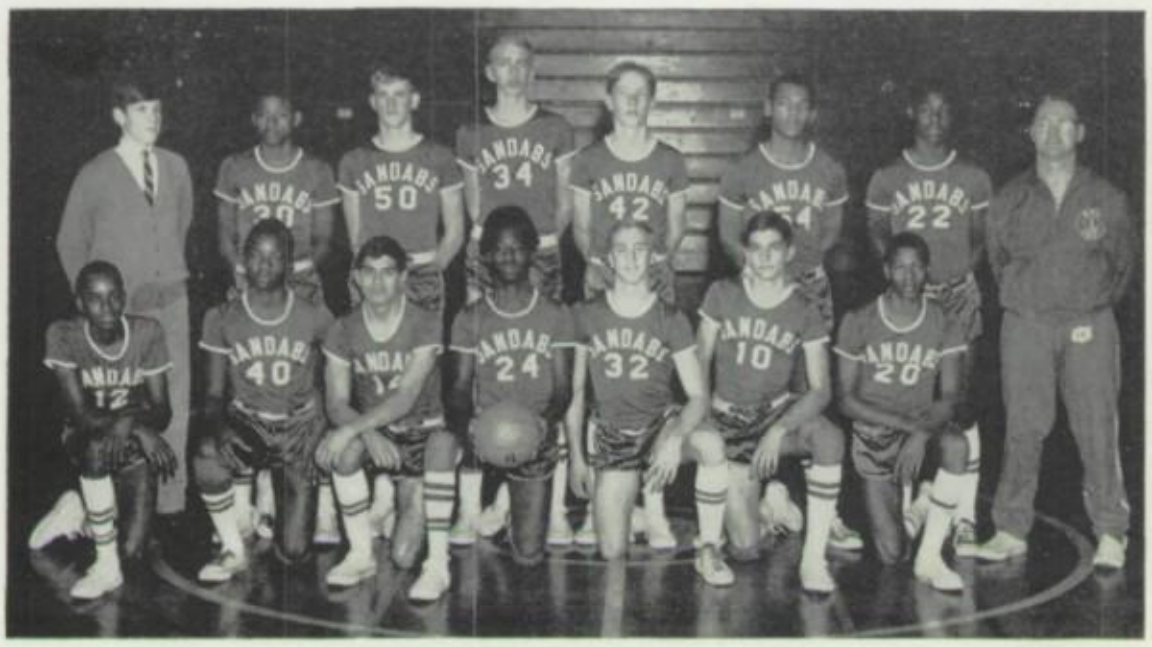

Bits Capture League Crow

The Bits' basketball team of 1967-68 added another championship to the BHS athletic record in topping the C class league standings. While capturing 17 victories, the Bits suffered only two losses. In pre-league action the Bits went undefeated until succumbing in overtime to Delano High in the finals of the first Bakersfield High Class C Basketball Tournament. The Bits defeated every team in league competition, failing only once to beat South High. In a tight race for league supremacy the Bits reigned supreme.

Leading the Bits was team captain and forward Willie Sweatt, assisted by playmaking guards Bruce Kroeker and Armando Gonzales, while Carl Toney, center, and James Johnson, forward, rounded out the starting five. The Bits combined fine offensive and defensive strength with determination, hustle and devotion to make a championship squad.

Willie Rogers attempts to lay up a field goal for the Bits against West High, while Ken Freeman races in for a possible rebound. Hustle and determination characterized the Bits' play in their many winning efforts on the way to league championship.

Drillers Try Harder, Keep Ahead of Competition

The 1968 Driller baseball team boasted one of the finest squads in SYL competition and was overwhelmingly favored to win valley championship honor. With a host of starters returning from last year's valley championship team, the Driller varsity was in fine shape to record another top season for BHS.

Considering the most experienced squad in league play, Driller victories came through coordination of an oustanding pitching staff and a formidable hitting attack. On the mound Ed Ontiveros and Ed Smith led the powerful pitching corps, while behind the plate Dave Ginn provided strong hitting and fielding leadership. Forming the infield nucleus were shortstop Louie Diaz and second baseman Dale McDowell, while Steve Ontiveros played third base and hard-hitting Ted Preston covered first base. In the outfield Roy Grimes started in left and Theron Brown covered center, while Jeff Siemon saw action in right.

Utilizing total spirit and effort plus individual talents, the Driller team was devoted to becoming No. 1 in baseball.

Even in practice the pitching prowess of Ed Ontiveros appears awesome, as it does to all Driller opponents during game conditions. For two seasons Ontiveros has led the BHS mound staff, the heart of Driller success, racking up many important victories and scoring several impressive performances.

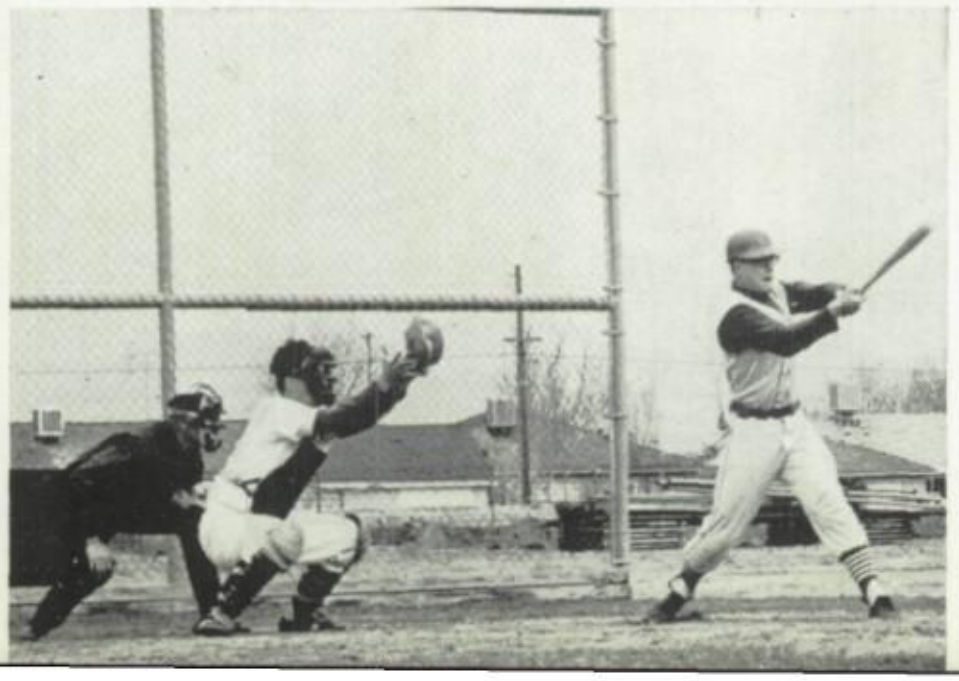

Good contact, level swing, and body momentum provide the keys to successful hitting, as a jayvee batsman demonstrates to perfection. Winning jayvee form scored several runs and many victories.

Steve Diaz tags the bag for the putout and looks over the situation for the possible double play. Heads-up defensive work was an important factor in several Frosh victories.

An uppercut swing nets little success in reaching base safely. Frosh inexperience was a significant limitation that was overcome through hard work and determination.

After capturing last year's league championship, the 1968 Driller junior varsity baseball team worked long and hard to achieve another top season. The team consisted almost exclusively of sophomores, and their continued success depended upon the improvement of hitting power and pitching skill. Among top players on the jayvee squad was the outstanding pitching-catching duo formed by Doug Kurhulas on the mound and Bob Hardcastle behind the plate. Offensively the team relied upon the heavy hitting of left-fielder Joe Cornejo and shortstop Steve Lackey, along with able assistance from Louie Gallardo and Vince Meagher. With consistency of play backed up by practice and team spirit, members of the junior varsity experienced the desire to win games for the present and the devotion to become members of the Driller varsity in the future.

JV's, Frosh Build fo

With the outstanding play of many individuals, the BHS Frosh baseball team combined for a satisfying season of several victories. The inexperienced freshmen learned the skills necessary for team success through the rigors of practice sessions and the demands of inter-school competition. Defensively, the squad was led by the sure-handed fielding of Steve Diaz at shortstop, Ken Watson at third base, and John Crosby behind the plate. Adding a good pitching staff to fine fielders meant a minimum of runs for opposing teams. Mike Lafave, Pat Sisneros, and Dave Jones led the offensive assault in providing the necessary hitting to supply winning margins for the Frosh. The team effort produced through hard work and determination built outstanding players for future dimension of Driller greatness on the baseball diamond.

Girls', Boys' Tennis Team

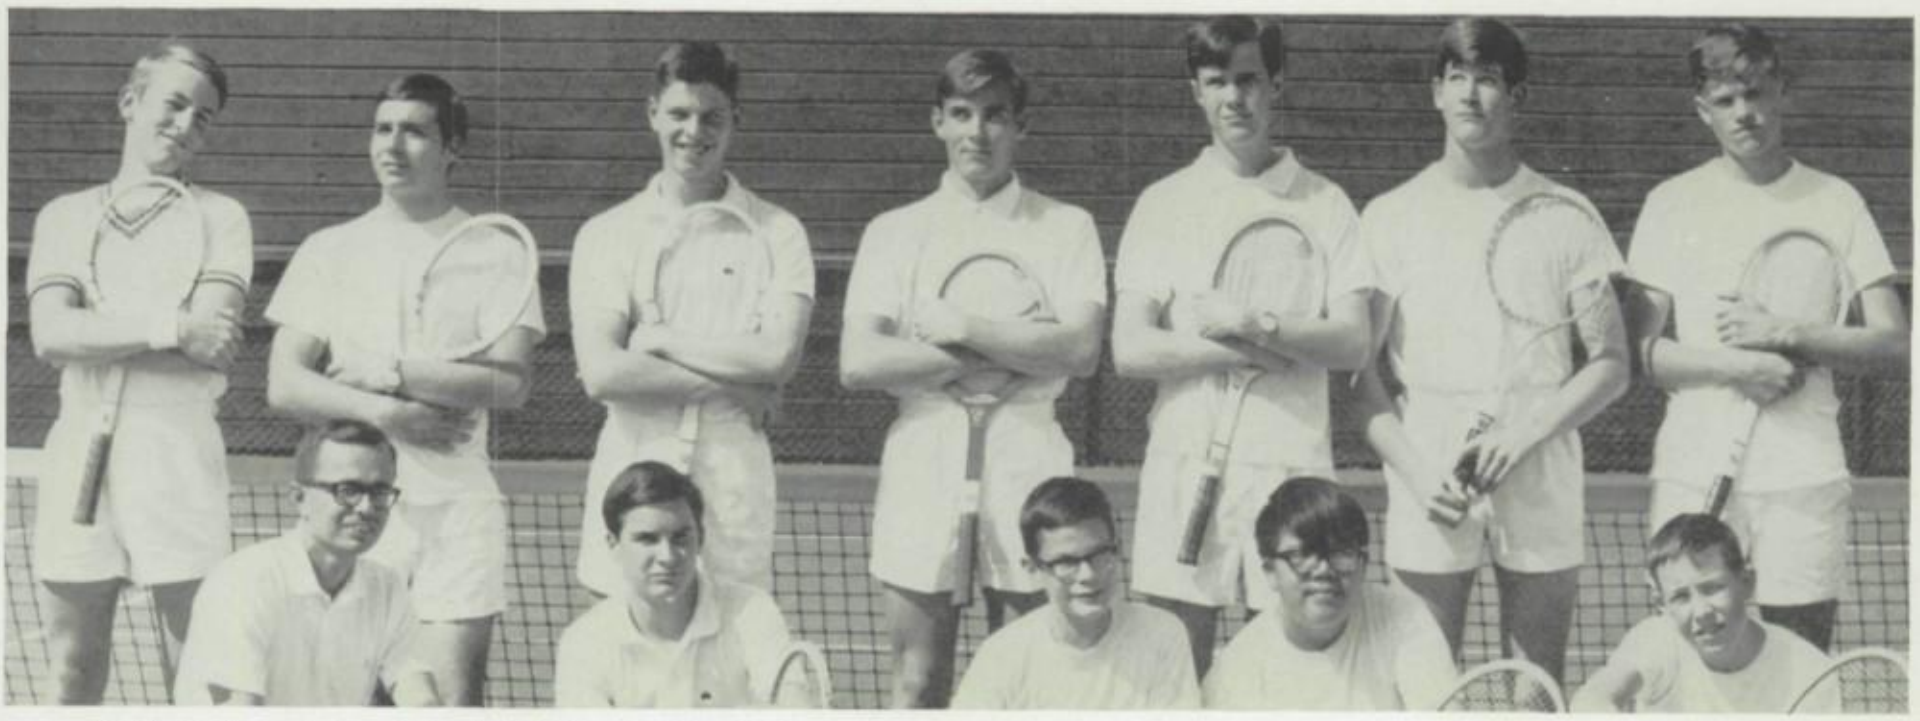

Experience and new blood combined to arouse the devotion of the BHS girls' tennis team to achieve a championship season in 1968 play. Forming the nucleus of the racket squad were Gloria Pananides, Chris Stinemeyer, and Kathy Langston—all veterans of last year's outstanding team, while freshman Tracy Macnair added further strength to help secure the squad's success. Together and/or individually the playing ability of the BHS girls challenged all opponents.

Concentration and determination are two keys to making a strategic return, as Tracy Macnair demonstrates. Individual efforts in singles play benefited the total team effort for success.

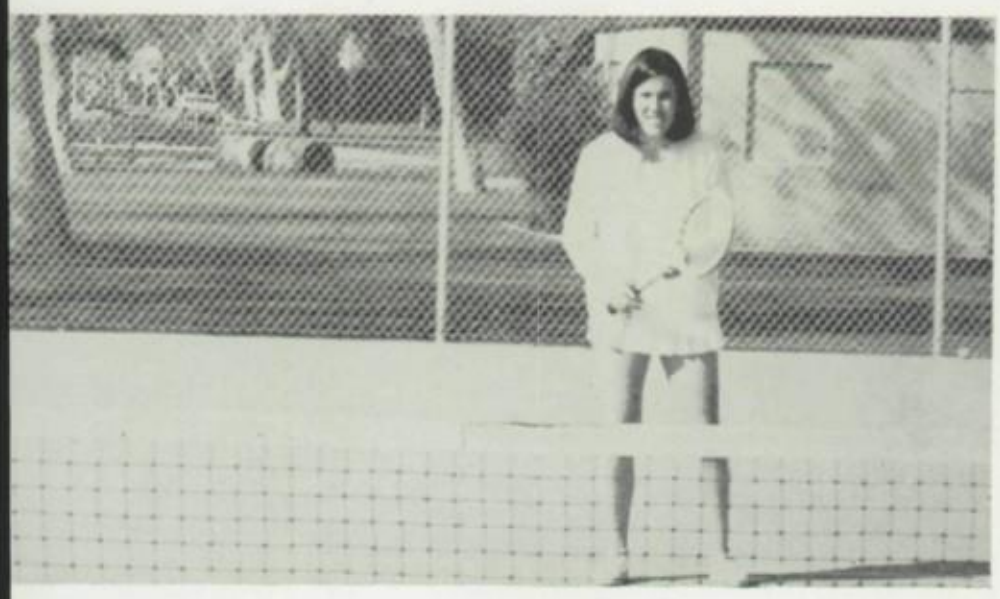

Barb Rademacher strikes a smashing blow, while her partner Kathy Biggar awaits the ball's return. Talent combined to make doubles pairings outstanding in match play.

ead League's Racket Squads

Matching the success of last year's Driller squad was the main devotion of the BHS boys' tennis team effort, hoping to repeat as valley champions in 1968. Paving the way to another stellar season was the outstanding racket-play of Roger Almklov, Ted Paulsen, Geff Gould, and Phil Bentley—all of whom returned from last year's victorious campaign to represent the Drillers with top tennis talent in singles and doubles matches.

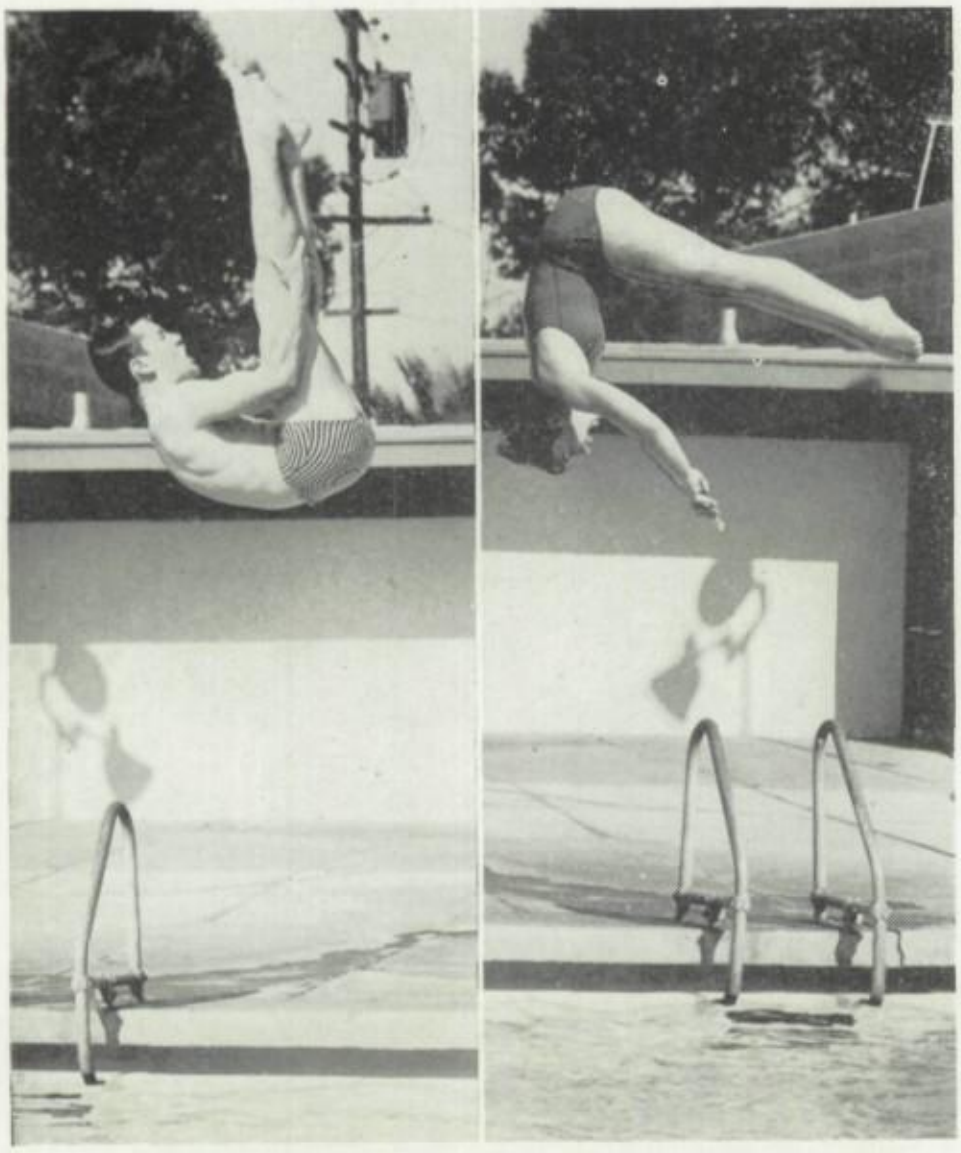

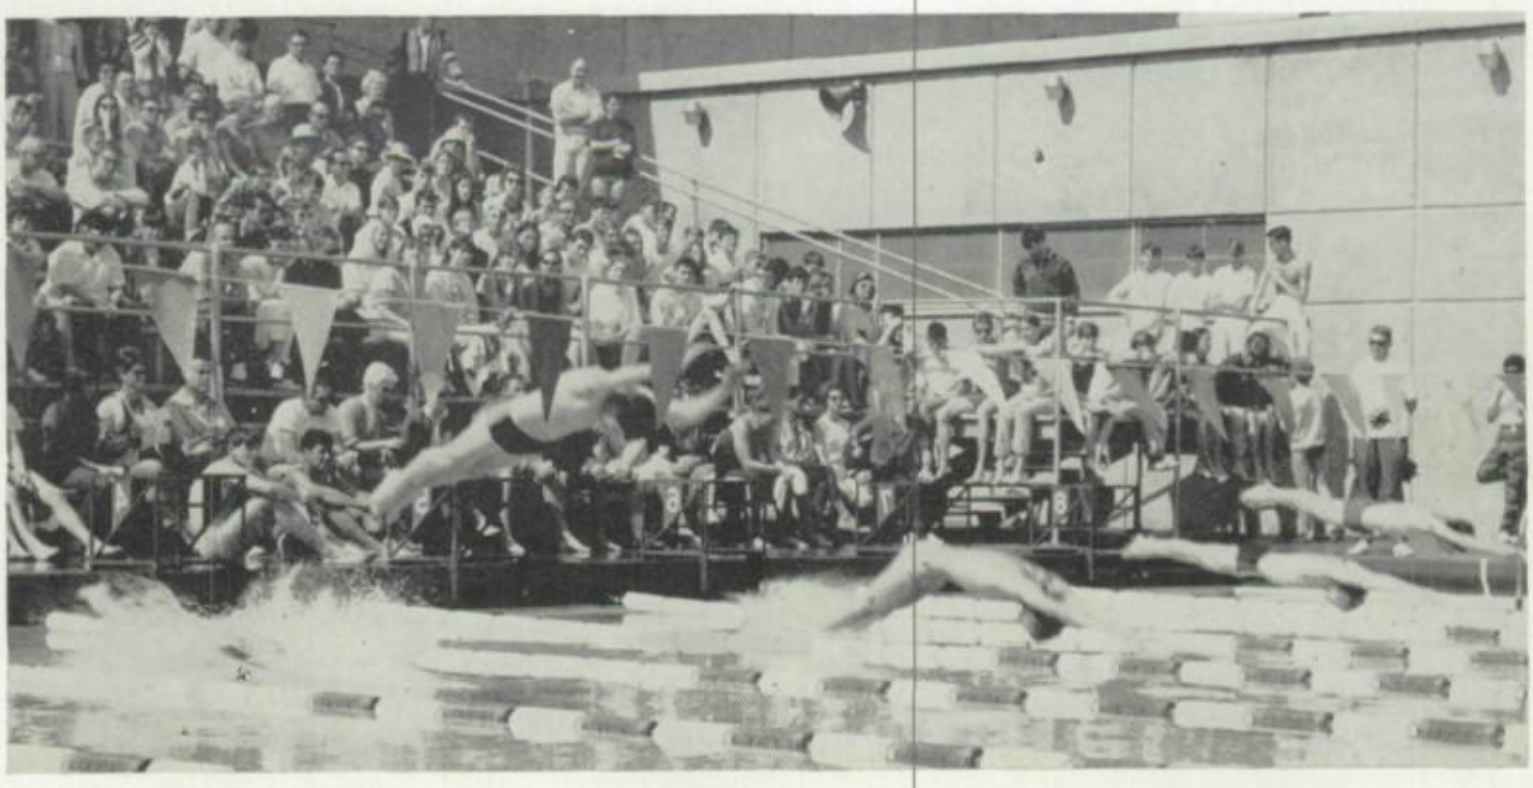

Timing and position are two keys to making a strategic return, as Bob Smith demonstrates. Practice and experience helped Drillers achieve a top tennis season.

Good Strokes, Big Kick

Splashing sights and sounds of students swimming strenuously showed the struggles for success of BHS swim squads. For the girls, the desire for professional perfection marked the efforts of the team's top swimmers; Lillian Pon, record holder in the 50 yard breaststroke, led the squad, while Barbara Finnegan, tops in freestyle events, and Kathy Polson, outstanding performer in butterfly races, added significant strength to team triumphs. For the boys, the individual effort to achieve superiority in swimming style and victory in racing results caused several noteworthy performances; particularly outstanding were the winning accomplishments of Willie Wachob in the 400 yard freestyle, Charles Polson in the 100 yard backstroke, and Ted Preston in the 200 yard medley. The devotion to practice and competition led to the goal of attaining team success.

The execution of skill, form, and finesse are the determinants of diving success as displayed by Driller divers. In the past few seasons the BHS swim squads have lacked divers thereby limiting team success, but with their return in 1968 extra points from diving assisted in winning meets.

A quick beginning keys a fast time and a good racing result. Competition in the freestyle events required a swift start, smooth and steady swimming, and a fleet finish.

o Topple Racing Rivals

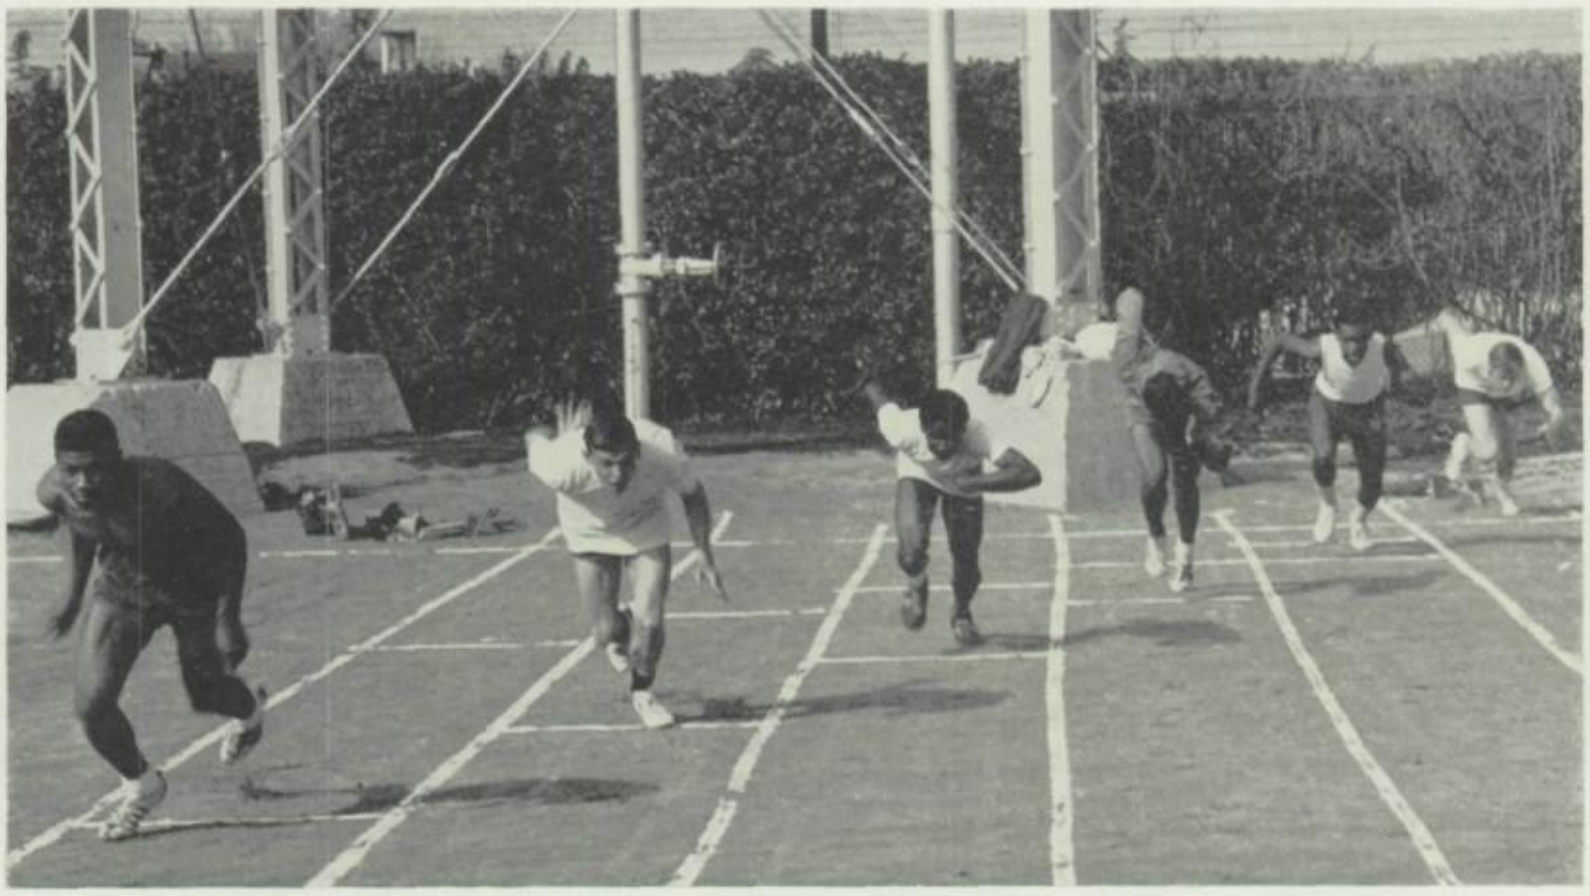

Having one of the finest seasons in BHS track history, the 1968 Driller track team became the top contender for SYL championship, while producing several outstanding individual performers capable of winning valley and state honors.

Leading the sprint squad were James Allen and Wilson Mackey with times under ten seconds for the 100 yard dash, while John Batsch and Bob Slaughter provided strong backup times. Jack Williams and Benny Blain scored for the distance squad in the 880 yard run, while John Caldwell and Allen Rude did well in the mile. The 440 and 880 yard relays proved to be top point winners for BHS and the strongest in SYL competition. Rounding out the team were the Driller hurdlers led by James Allen, who topped all opponents in low hurdles, and Johnny Brussard, who claimed victories in high hurdles.

Devotion to individual achievement benefited the team effort to capture athletic honors for BHS.

Driller hurdlers loosen up by competing against each other. Inter-team individual rivalry produced top efforts for track meet victories.

Striding toward success Driller sprinters strain to win the race to the wire. Practice competition against teammates prepared the BHS squad for superior performances against opposition from other schools.

Practice makes perfect, as Donovan Daniels warms up by clearing the high jump bar at six feet. Field squad members contributed key points to Driller track meet success.

Field, Track Add Up to Victories for BHS

Members of the 1968 Driller field team provided good representation for BHS in basic physical competition and amassed many points to assist in winning meets.

Strong high jumpers opened the Driller threat with Donovan Daniels, Dan Hansen, and Roger Barns recording jumps of over six feet. James Allen was the squad's top broad jumper with 23-foot leaps, which placed him among the best in valley competition. Johnny Brussard led Drillers in the triple jump, while Jerry Bainbridge soared to 13 feet in the pole vault. Throwing the discus over 150 feet was Frank Pina, while in the shot put Drillers lacked necessary distance for success.

With the combined track and field efforts BHS achieved honor through devotion to victory.

Long Distance Running—Lonely, but Heroic, Sport

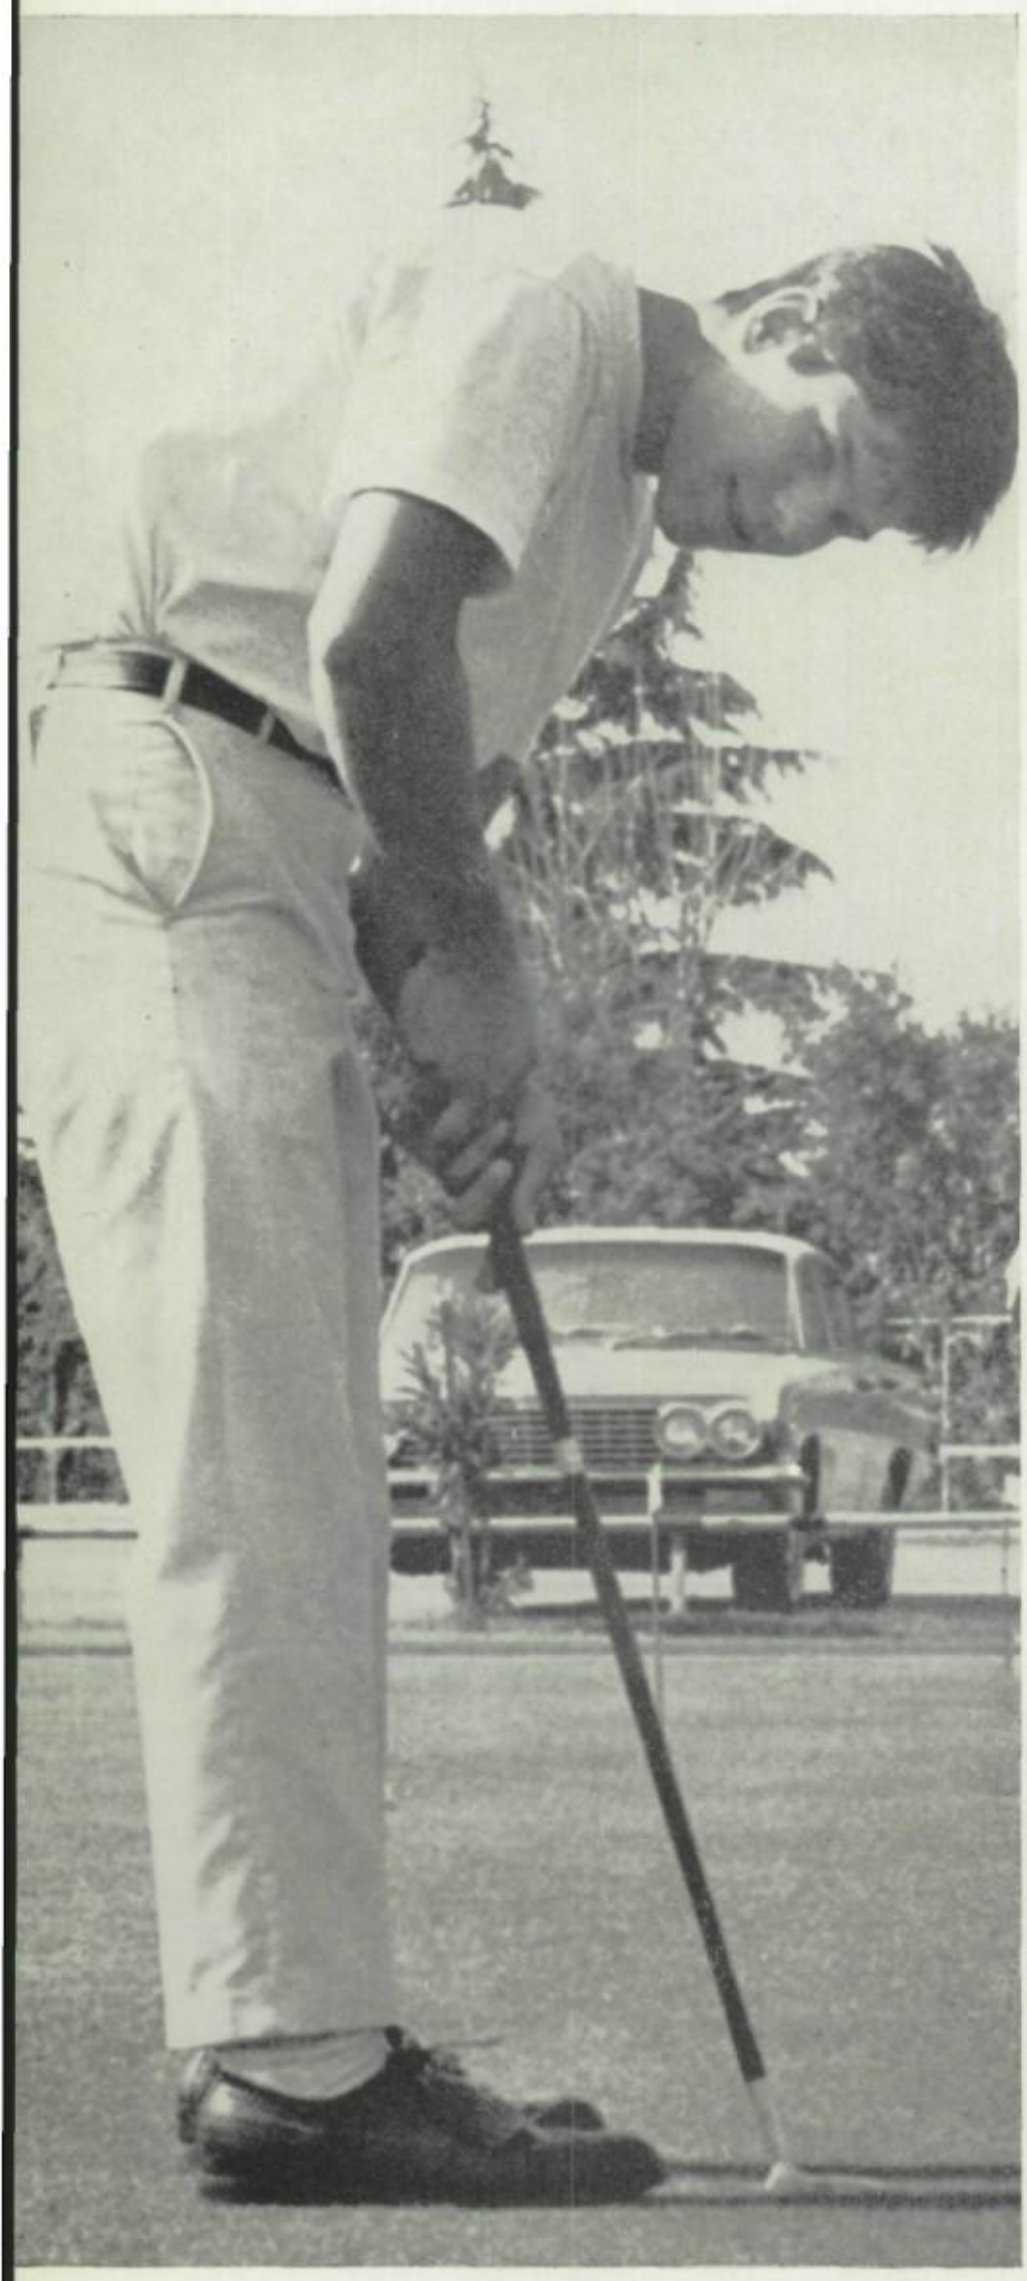

Although finishing fourth among league schools, the Bakersfield High School varsity cross country team boasted some outstanding runners. Alen Rude and John Caldwell led the long distance squad in every meet followed by other high-scoring runners—Jack Williams, Charles Everly, and Don Hicks. Long distance running is a test of skill, energy, endurance, and determination to succeed, but such heroic traits do not receive the glory of student body spirit and exaltation. Cross country combines the best efforts of the top five out of seven runners on a team in a long distance race to score points for victory. Individual devotion to achievement builds a successful cross country team.

The long-distance runners of the cross-country team relax during a break in their practice session. Succeeding in cross-country required stamina, energy, and endurance on the part of each runner on the team.

Practice sessions entail running as much as possible with and against fellow squad members in order to improve competitive spirt and willingness to win.

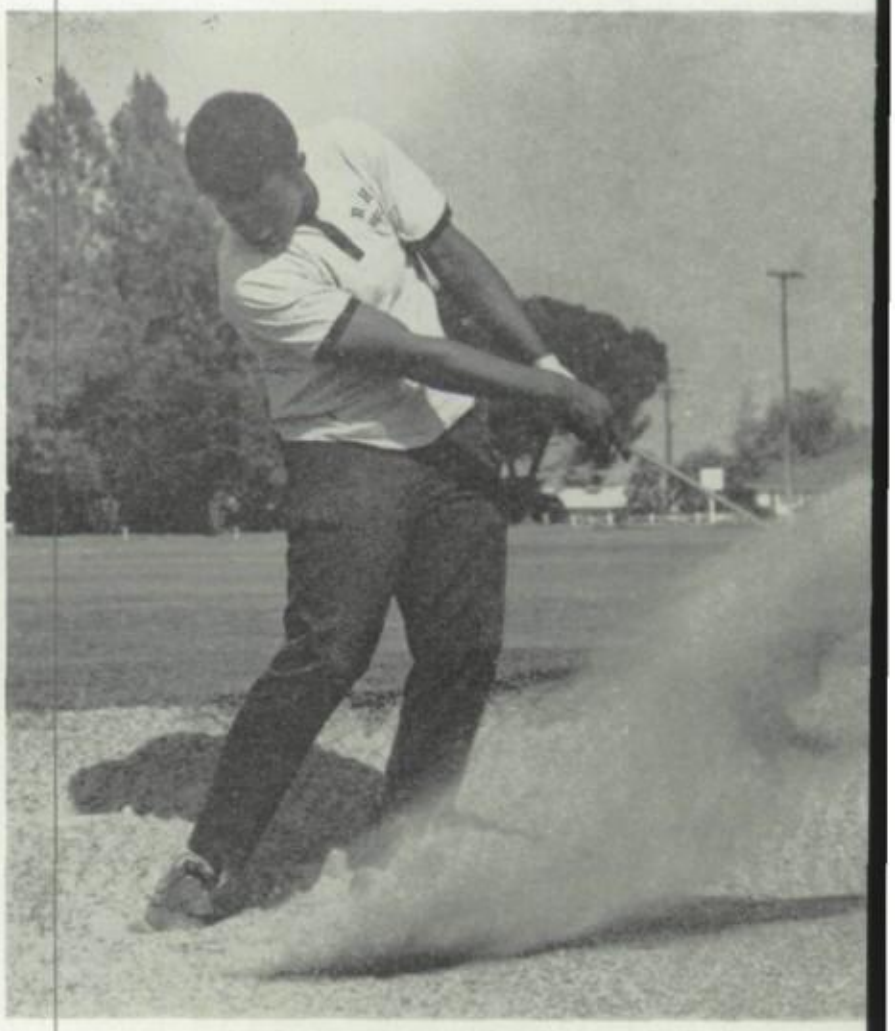

After a smooth follow-through, Richard Bruschi awaits the satisfaction of seeing his putt drop into the cup. The ability to putt properly made the difference between success and failure in match play.

The members of the 1968 golf team got off to a slow start in SYL play as they lost to Foothill High, East High, and North High, but were victorious over South High and West High. With the belated arrival of some key players, the team began to put up a better showing in a drive to the top of league standings. Leading swingers on the Driller squad were Larkin Mackey, Richard Bruschi, Rick Ewing, Steve Heber, Brad Sloan, and Rick Garcia. In a sport that demands precise execution, team members practiced twice weekly at Stockdale Country Club to improve their backswing technique and to correct bad habits. From the tees to the fairways, into the traps, onto the greens and finally in the cup—following the little white ball wherever it went, BHS golfers devoted their efforts to team success.

Organizations provide students with the opportunity to pursue their interests and to work with others. As the essence of the extra-curricular program, clubs supply an identity for many students, while at the same time they serve as an outlet for devotion to a wide range of interests. Clubs represent a meaningful involvement and a significant part of a well-rounded high school education for students through the encouragement of inquisitiveness, participation, and commitment. Gaining enjoyable experiences, developing talent skills, acquiring leadership abilities, and making new acquaintances — all come through membership in organizations.

-Object of Oracle Staff Devotion

History unfolds through pages of a high school yearbook, as it presents a review of the year's events, accomplishments, and activities. Because a yearbook represents an important momento in recollections of school life, producing a pleasing book for all interests is an extremely difficult task for a group of student editors and reporters. To reach this goal the Oracle staff designs a framework of layout and composition to be filled with photographs and copy that will make the book a source of fond remembrances in years to come. In so doing staff members learn to cope with all the problems and details of producing a large-scale, complex publication. The Oracle staff working together achieves satisfaction from their devotion in creating a yearbook that they hope will be appreciated and cherished by all.

In today's complex society the desire for information about events throughout the world has caused the development of sophisticated media of communication for mass audiences. On a far less grand scale the student body of a high school represents a complex mass society in microcosm, and the responsibility of maintaining communications within this population belongs to the school newspaper. News and features of school and inter-school activities inform readers about what's happening, while in another respect the school newspaper serves as the voice of the student body and represents the school to the community. Dimensions of school life are reported by the student journalists of the Blue and White staff who are learning with devotion the skills of mass communication.

Scholarship, Service, Creativity— Goals for Highly Motivated Students

Learning in order to achieve happiness and success throughout life is the main goal of high school education, while accomplishing it requires maximum effort in pursuit of knowledge. The ability to attain academic proficiency represents much more than skill in learning; it also reflects determined diligence to create superior performance, curiosity of facts and ideas beyond learning experiences, and devotion to the learning process as the key to the future. Honoring the success of academically superior students, the California Scholarship Federation recognizes the dimensions of devotion that comprise scholastic achievement.

Through creative writing a person crystalizes abstract thought concepts into meaningful expression in words and ideas. As learned on the Ikon staff, writing creatively involves combining dimensions of life experiences with patterns of concentrated thinking and planning to form meaningful literary art.

Words are emotional experiences; they present challenges, supply information, and create entertainment. Quill and Scroll, a national honor journalism society, encourages student writers to project dimensions of thought through different forms of literature in creating images of life with the written word.

Photographic Picturization Presents Infinite Images in Looking at Life

Creative art manifests thoughts and emotions with skills and talents into meaningful forms and representations to evoke a critical response. As an art medium, photography appeals to viewers for the realistic qualities presented in pictures of life. The skills necessary to reach perfection in a representational form require long hours of learning in methods, practicing in use, and developing in techniques. The photographic process offers absolute extremes in perspective viewpoints—from the enlargement of detail to greater than life size to the reduction of object to minuteness in appearance. Film records life through a lens, but photography presents infinite dimensions in manipulating images of reality.

Talented Talkers Strive for Communication o

Learning the semantic significance of the denotation and the connotation of words in communicating ideas, thoughts, and attitudes is a difficult problem that unless overcome breaks down understanding among human beings. Verbal communication requires devotion to an exactness that is inperceptible to those who listen but necessary to those who speak—that is, the National Forensic League.

Giving form to speech elevates the ability to communicate from the status of conversation to the development of art. Creating an emotional response through visual and verbal techniques supplies the form for drama in translating artistic abilities from literary expression to stage presentation. In advanced civilization the art of communication is continuously becoming more and more complex. While the spoken word conveys thoughts which one desires to be revealed, the language of music uncovers one's innermost feelings through differing vocal expressions rather than the choices of words. The beauty of music, simply sung or chorally complex, is measured by the establishment of mood. Whether music is light in meaning and style, as in musical comedy, or serious in significance and expression, as in religious hymns, singers portray the mood of written sounds through their individual interpretations of emotional feeling. When many voices combine the sound of music intensifies and grows in complexity of presentation, while creation of mood becomes more meaningful to performance. A choir of voices represents wide dimensions of communication available through musical forms.

or Entertainment Experiences

Music has been an integral part of cultural history since man first began to seek diversion and enjoyment. The melodious and harmonious qualities of music were first understood by mankind through singing experiences. In the modern world the scope of voice expression in music ranges in style from the over-powering virtuosity of operatic arias to the twangy sounds of country and western, from the rhythm and improvisation of jazz to the whimsey and storytelling of folk ballads. One quality remains constant throughout all styles of music—the desire for entertainment.

To present music in a manner that will entertain others requires talent and skill, training and practice, and ability to perform. A singer uses natural endowments to gain experience so that listeners will enjoy the finished product. The masculine voice carries a sense of power and depth in musical expression, while the sound of a woman singing furnishes a sweetly melodic counterpoint. Voices joined together blend into the formation of a completed musical effect, which requires the rigid discipline of creating a unified sound of many from the self-expression of individuals. The finished product, an entertaining experience, is the reward for devotion to achievement.

Music of Driller Band Supplies Sound of Spiri

Feeling of Excitement

The sound of spirit is equally thrilling for those who cheer as well as for those who hear, but there is nothing so synonymous with spirit as the sensation generated by the sound of a marching band. Is there anyone whose spine does not tingle each time he hears the music of a band marching triumphantly on the field or in parade? Supplying the sound, tempo, and aura of excitement at sports events and school activities, the Driller Band symbolizes the proud traditions of Bakersfield High School through devotion to excellence in presentations of musical performance and enthusiasm in maintaining the heritage of Driller spirit.

Orchestra Combines Instrumental Sounds to Create Musical Patterns of Enjoyment

Man's ingenuity has developed many significant artifacts for convenience in living, but he has also created some unique properties that serve merely to entertain. For instance, the musical instrument makes beautiful sounds. When many instruments are joined together, the sound that arises is again different and varied in qualities of tone, melody, rhythm, and harmony.

An orchestra is made through the blending of individuals who perform their skills on instruments of sound that combine to create a completed effect in musical expression. The facility of the individual in carrying out patterned operations while maintaining self-expression is the key to the performance of music by an orchestra. That the sounds of music cause enjoyment for listeners reveals the time in effort and energy that is devoted to the creation and development of an orchestra.

Self-expression has always been the foremost determining factor in the creative process, while the desire for personal satisfaction supplies an equally significant motivation for creativity. The feelings and emotions of the individual become manifest through acts of creation in modern dancing. Grace, poise, and fluidity of motion are desired qualities that are necessary for the beauty of a dance routine. The composition and arrangement of dance techniques with basic thoughts that constitute choreographic patterns come as the result of experience gained through discipline, repetition, and practice. The fusion of coordinated dance movements with mind-compelling ideas give form to the modern dance in its infinite dimensions of programmed kinetic expressions.

With exact precision and advanced planning, machines are combinations of several moving parts that, when synchronized properly, perform delicate operations of production. The human body resembles the mechanism of a machine; when several such bodies join together for performance of patterned operations, their combined movement requires the exact timing and diligent work that goes into building machinery. Withstanding the hardships of cold limbs in cold weather and cold water, the Aquanettes and the Drillerettes represent the discipline that creates exhibitions of synchronized swimming and marching skills in artistic formations. Through repetition of patterned physical exercises, each group of girls achieves the fluidity of motion and exactness of timing to present the ultimate of precision in their devotion to performance.

Superior Athletic Skills Receive Recognition i

The glory of achievement rewards any person striving for success. On the athletic field the noise of a spirited crowd yelling for victory gives competitors a desire to win by inspiring supreme individual efforts. Recognizing their devotion, Block B and Circle B honor the finest athletes in all sports at Bakersfield High School.

Inter-school athletic competition promotes spirit, while for the individual participant sports develop physical skills and good sportsmanship. For girls the opportunity to attain the positive values of physical education is limited; to counteract this lack, the Teen Teachers of Bakersfield High School stress devotion to physical fitness and athletic skills for girls.

Many of the important qualifications that determine success in life are acquired through experiences in school environment. Beyond knowledge from classroom learning, the opportunities of school life supply each student with chances of developing valuable personality characteristics of the future. Particularly, traits of good character, leadership, and service can be gained through classroom, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities. Stressing the principles of positive characteristics the Boys' Service Club represents a prime example in the adaptation of personality traits to constructive action. Service to others provides meaning for oneself—such is the devotion for members of Boys Service Club as they perform many worthwhile and necessary tasks while enjoying themselves in the process.

Valkyries: Assistance through Serving Results in Service to the community is best demonstrated through the actions of people devoted to participation and involvement. The existence of socially-oriented organizations is derived from the feeling of obligation to perform public service. In fulfilling this concept a club offers help through aid and assistance to the areas and people where such service is needed. Following the goals of community service organizations, the Valkyries learn that through devotion to work with others there are two definite results—one, that a job well-done supplies a concrete reward as the tangible outcome of assistance projects, and two, that there is personal satisfaction in doing something beneficial for others.

A gaggle of girls gather together to meet, greet, and get into Valkyries. Veteran Valkyries view proceedings, while prospects pose for positive impression to secure selection into the the circle of club constituents.

acially Troubled Society

Throughout the history of mankind there have been several confrontations between racial and ethnic groups that have never been totally resolved. Today the conflict is clearly defined domestically between black people and white people, while more subtly in international affairs, between the yellow and white races. In the advanced, scientific modern world, the humanistic value of man's relationships with other men is neglected and thus becomes a great problem. The misunderstandings of inter-racial tensions abound at all levels of society and frequently begin early in personality development.

The youth of the United States today is inheriting a racially tense world created substantially by the biases of previous generations; thus, the burden of overcoming prejudice and hypocrisy rests squarely with young people in the world of the future that they will build. Committed to the dimensions of understanding and brotherhood are members of the Inter-Racial Council.

Ethnic, Racial Clubs Develop Identity, Cultural Symbols of Student Heritage

The United States as a nation is truly unique in one aspect that differentiates it from all other countries throughout the history of the world. Since the beginning of written record, the people who have lived on American soil have been almost exclusively immigrant. The few who can call America their native home are of Indian ancestry; all other present-day inhabitants are descendents of people who have emigrated here for various reasons. This phenomenon has had a profound influence on the history of the United States and the development of its cultural, social, economic, political, and moral patterns. In other words, life in the United States has evolved and grown entirely from the amalgamation of immigrant value brought here by foreign settlers.

What today is known as "American identity" and "American culture" in reality is the fusion of many foreign identities and cultures that have come together in one geographic location and are lumped together by the word American. These customs and values are recognizable to students who honor their ancestry through present-day identification ritual —that is, in ethnic and racial social organizations as Oriental Students Clubs, Los Amigos, and George Washington Carver Club. The strength and power gained from the majesty of things American in actuality develops from the substantial dimensions of independent strains of life-heritage.

Throughout history only in civilizations where agriculture has thrived has there been opportunity for the development of sophisticated cultures. That modern agriculture has been able to produce an unprecedented abundance of food and fiber is due to improved technology and scientific efficiency gained through extensive education in agricultural practices. To use and to understand the techniques of contemporary farming, students join the Future Farmers of America, an organization dedicated to learning and living, earning and serving through vocational agriculture. Progress in skills, an important dimension of education, is especially significant to future farmers and farmerettes as they prepare for the day when their abilities will help to supply worldwide needs of agricultural products.

eaching, Helping: Future Goals for Girls

The hopes for the future of mankind belong to society's children. In order that the instruction children receive will be fruitful, their teachers will have to combine academic tutoring, social guidance, and parental concern. Future Teachers of America are preparing to devote themselves to this task with its multitudinous rewards.

Formerly people afflicted with mental illness were either ridiculed or totally ignored by society. While shut away in sanitariums or hospitals, the mentally retarded had no chance to develop into the happy individuals they can be when others care enough to devote time and effort to bring progress through help. At BHS there are friends who care, the members of Focus Club.

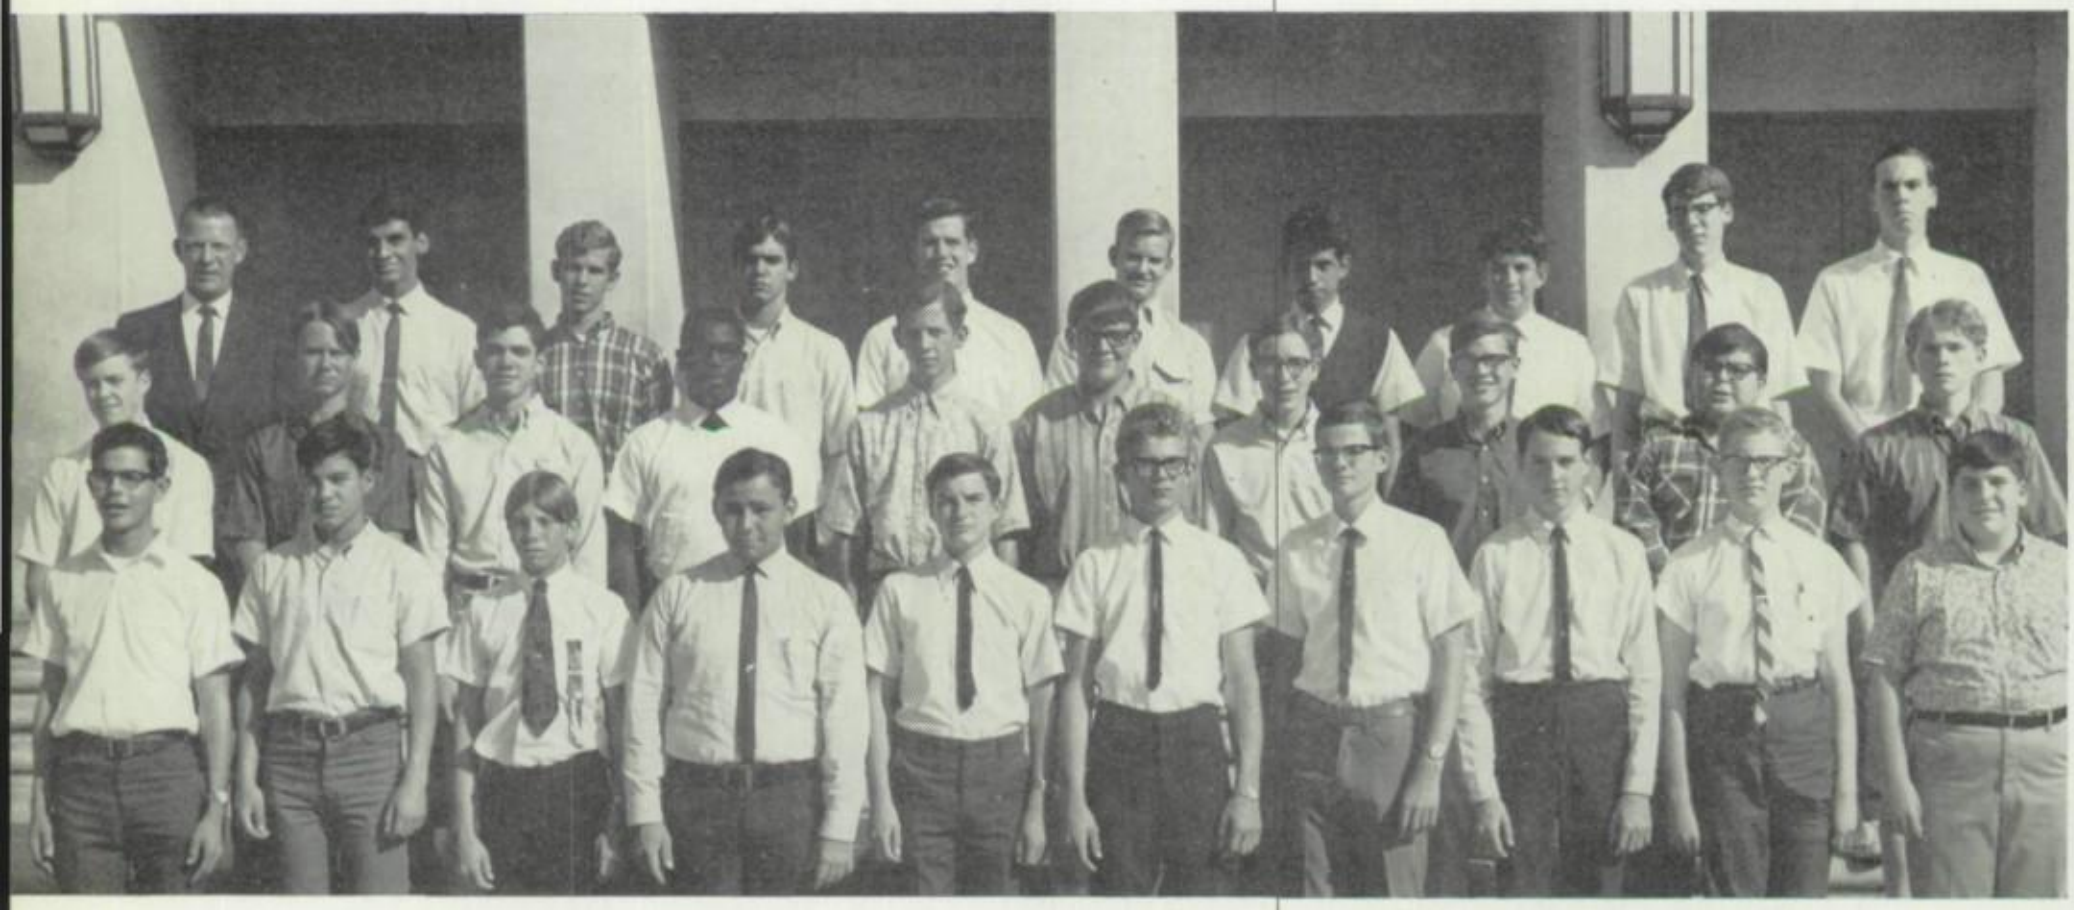

As one of the most salient facets of womanhood, the art of homemaking represents the outcome of a philosophy that has been ingrained perpetually in world society — "a woman's place is in the home." In the natural scheme of life, the female has always remained at home to protect her young, to care for the habitat, and to meet the needs of her family. The oldest and most respected profession also entails the greatest responsibility in developing fundamental habits and values of life from the experiences of family living. Preparing for woman's noble profession, the Future Homemakers of America are learning the initial requirements for a lifelong devotion.

As machines play an ever-increasing role in school operations, knowledge of machinery becomes more and more significant to the efficiency of the educational system.

Curiosity supposedly killed the cat, but man is a much luckier animal. Interest in knowledge above and beyond classroom learning is easily available to all who seek it, especially if the subject of interest is science. The demand for knowing more about various dimensions of biology, chemistry, and physics supplies the reason for the existence of the Science Club.

In today's world people take for granted the existence of complex electronic equipment used in all phases of life—from industry to government, from entertainment to education. In classes students become familiar with such machines as overhead projectors, tape recorders, record players, movie projectors, and others. Operating this equipment requires the knowledge and devotion of the Visual Service crew.

f Spirit, Clubs, Money

As part of the operation of the extra-curricular program there are several organizations which function solely for the service and regulation of campus affairs. These bodies are staffed by several students from each class and are headed by a commissioner selected in general election. Some such commissions include the following: the Spirit, Rallies, and Assemblies Commission (SRA), which is responsible for building and maintaining the display of school pride and spirit; the Organizations Commission, which is composed of representatives from every campus club who work together to coordinate all organizational activities; and the Finance Commission, which manages monetary affairs through student body card sales, concession allotments, and budgetary distribution of funds. Many dimensions of student life are controlled through the work of commissions.

Under the auspices of the student government program, the diversified structure of extra-curricular school activities is organized and coordinated by the work of student body commissions. Each commission controls some dimension of school life, including: the Publicity Commission, which publicizes all school news and events through campus facilities and community communications media; the Cultural Activities Commission, which brings together through mutual interests all organizations concerned with artistic expression; the Welfare and Safety Commission, which is responsible for maintaining clean campus and student safety standards; and the Foregin Exchange Commission, which sponsors foreign exchange students and acclimates them to American life in building better international understanding. These several commissions are devoted to the service and enrichment of student life.

erve Public in School Work

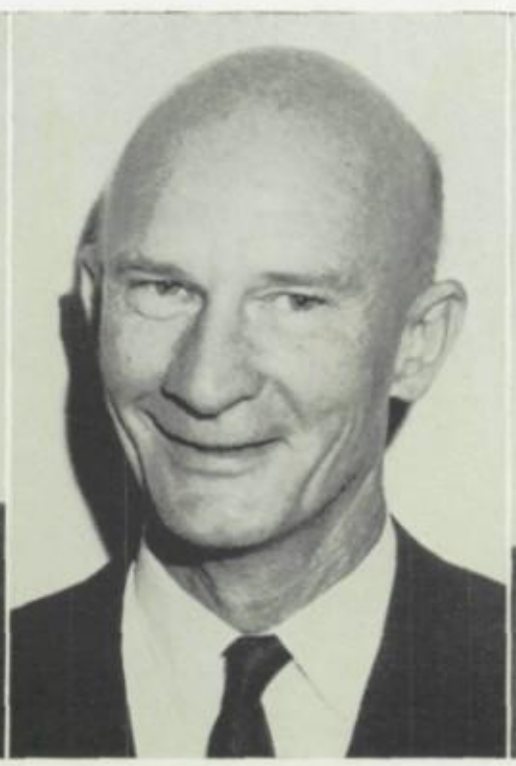

The control, operation, and administration of the Kern County Joint Union High School District is the responsibility of a publicly elected Board of Trustees and appointed Superintendent of Schools. After many years of leadership in the field of education, Superintendent of Schools Theron McCuen is retiring this year; likewise, his Deputy Superintendent Theron Taber is ending his career of educational service. Assuming the position of Superintendent of Schools is Dr. John Eckhart, who has three new assistant superintendents—Dr. J. S. Wallace, Dr. Grant Jensen, and Harry Ward, Jr. Together with the continuing Board of Trustees, the new administrators plan to devote themselves to improve educational opportunities in Kern County High Schools.

Dr. J. S. Wallace

This year's Oracle theme, Dimensions of Devotion, presents a stirring challenge to students at Bakersfield High School to take an active part in today's world. Perhaps one of the greatest needs today is for people with devotion to duty to assume leadership roles in their community, the nation, and the world. The truly devoted person is one who takes great care in establishing his purposes in life. Once this task is completed he is willing to devote time and energy to the fulfillment of these purposes.

These are some dimensions of devotion which I hope the graduates of Bakersfield High School will use in continuing to maintain the traditions of leadership, accomplishment, and high ideals which have been characteristic of those who have left our halls during the previous seventy-five years.

I extend wishes to our graduates, and to those students who will be returning with us again next year, for a satisfying fulfillment of their life's goals.

J. S. Wallace, Principal

Planning, Administration

Developing new ideas for educational improvements while continuously striving to better established programs and institutions is an important step in perfecting school management and operation. While overseeing administrative functions of the school, the assistant principals work constantly to implement new programs which will aid teachers in the performance of their jobs and students in the attainment of a better educational environment. That the variety and quality of school programs and facilities determine the attitude of students toward their education causes frequent re-evaluation of school policies by administrative leadership.

Mr. Al Dennis
Director of Student Finance

Student experiences inside and outside the classroom are carefully guided and advised by the special members of the administrative staff. The Director of Student Activities provides impetus, experience, and energy in organizing and maintaining the extra-curricular program. Student body funds—their use and handling—are closely watched and managed by the Director of Student Finance. Important statistical information to assist counselors in advising students on classes and careers comes from the Director of Testing. Aiding students through guidance and leadership is the service and devotion of the student advisors.

Forming the needed link between administrative decisions and counseling functions, the Dean of Students serves as the leader in student advising situations. From dealing with supervision of campus control to assisting with difficult behavioral problems the Dean of Students staff is constantly busy in fulfilling the special requirements of school operation and student management. The dean's diverse responsibilities include coordination of student discipline, liaison with law enforcement agencies, and supervision of work permits. In the many dimensions of his work the Dean of Students is committed to help students adjust to the school environment.

Specific Needs of Individuals

Individualized attention to each student serves as the main function of counseling facilities. In the cubicle counselors' offices students often talk out academic and personal problems as well as discuss potential goals for future achievement. To motivate students to achieve success through the full utilization of their abilities is ultimately the goal of the counseling experience. It is within the capability and the desire of counselors to reach a close inter-personal relationship with every student in school so as to offer advice, encouragement, and opportunity to match the needs of every student. Empathy and understanding are the key tools with which the counselor works in order to help students through the problems, adjustments, and responsibilities of school life. The realms of devotion are boundless within the relationship of counselor and student.

Communication of thought and knowledge is made possible through the use of language. The discipline of English emphasizes the perfection of communication skills necessary for learning and life. In all phases of academic endeavor proficiency in using and understanding language is the requisite for achieving success. The command of language is built upon mastery of basic skills—grammar, vocabulary, and spelling—which become devices used in the art of self-expression. Study of literature provides understanding of the meaning of language while developing a sense of appreciation for communication skills. All dimensions of human thought and knowledge develop from the ability to communicate.

Mrs. Cruikshank reviews the elements of composition with some of her students. Perfection of writing skills is a requirement that is indispensable to thoughtful self-expression.

Understanding Past, Presen

The focal point of current world happenings is pointed out by Mrs. Shasteen. Understanding the effects of the present in shaping the future increased the social awareness of students.

Events that have happened, are happening, or will happen, and what these occurrences mean form the scope of the social studies. To promote an understanding of the world, its peoples, and its problems, the social studies instructor approaches the present by explaining the past and its importance in comprehending the present and its effects in determining the future. Mistakes of the past become examples to avert in the future, while problems of the present become challenges to overcome someday. The dimensions of creating a better world come through devotion to social awareness.

Knowing Unknowns: Ques

A logical progression from problem to solution is the essence of mathematics. The application of patterned operations and formulas in finding the values of unknown quantities develops the ability to do quantitative thinking in systematic sequence. Mathematical concepts are learned through practice and repetition and are linked together to establish orderly patterns of reasoning. Deduction and induction are introduced as dimensions of thought processes applied in problem solving. The patterns and problems of finding solutions become examples for use in future exercises throughout mathematics and beyond.

Miss Meyer reviews the solution set to a problem in her advanced algebra class. The development of systematic thinking resulted from learning the patterned operations of finding values of unknown quantities.

f Math, Science

From the orbiting electrons of the atom to the orbiting bodies of the solar system, from the physical laws of motion to the living processes of the cell—the quest for understanding and explaining phenomena is the monumental task of science. For students and teachers science offers a stimulating challenge to learn more about the various dimensions of existence and its mysteries. The adventure of investigating scientific facts, the thrill of discovering new ideas, the experience of performing experimental operations—all contribute to the excitement of learning in science classrooms.

Through assisting students in investigating scientific facts, Mr. Lang demonstrates the meaning of physical laws. Understanding and explaining the realms of science supplied the reason for classroom experimentation.

The determination that all students gain a working application of skills acquired from their education supplies the basis for vocational instruction in the industrial arts. Experience with equipment ranging from the T-square and drafting board of architectural drawing to the brake drum lathe and battery tester of automobile mechanics stresses development of talents necessary to the individual in meeting the challenges of an increasingly competitive society. Simulated working conditions within the classroom environment add a significant dimension to education through practical training for the future.

People skilled in the science of agriculture help to provide the needed food and fiber for the preservation of mankind. Through labor experience and class training in agricultural methods, students learn the dimensions of scientific technology and increased efficiency used for production in modern farming. The public is able to benefit from the productivity of agriculture through diverse dimensions of business practices—distribution, marketing, trade, and finance. With classroom instruction and practice students learn the skills of specially-trained workers that are required to operate the mechanics of business efficiently.

Communication and culture, basic developments of human life, comprise the building blocks of civilization; in two specialized departments of instruction students learn to use, to manipulate, and to master these essential processes. Foreign language training involves learning new patterns of communication based upon repetition and memorization of words, meanings, and phrases to achieve fluency in usage. Within the field of home economics methods of cultural custom are taught by means of practice and experience to achieve fluency in homemaking abilities. Civilization grows from dimensions of learning in communication and cultural skills.

Fun, Frolic, Fitnes

Developing desirable qualities of physical maturity to coincide with intellectual growth is important in the education of all students. Physical education for girls provides a program of daily exercise, stressing the development of a healthy, physically fit body. Participation in various sports and activities also improves fitness while building and challenging athletic skills. In physical education the devotion to improve enables girls to experience the dimensions of achievement through enjoyment.

A healthy body to match an alert mind is the classical Greek view of mankind in perfection. Modern education strives to achieve this traditional value in its vigorous physical education program. Under the guidance of dedicated leadership boys face challenges in meeting high standards of physical ability, strength, and endurance. Participation in various individual and team sports develops important dimensions of personality by stressing sportsmanlike qualities and competitive spirit.

Cooperation of Parent

People who devote themselves to the education of others become the prime factors in establishing the characteristics of students. Attempting to present the greatest benefits of an education while maintaining the welfare of students combine to form the main concern of both teachers and parents. The Parent-Teacher Association serves to establish a desirable relationship between those people who work separately to bring meaning to a student's educational experiences. In coordination with school personnel the parents' major obligation is to continue the benefits of learning in the home environment. Through personal, vocational, and family devotions, teachers and parents create the positive values needed for the educational process.

The operation of a high school administration is composed of many vital functions and services; one of the most important elements in the administrative structure is the job performed by secretaries. Like a cog in the mechanism of a gear, it is the secretary who works as the basic link between school operations, student services, counseling facilities, and public relations. In each capacity the members of the clerical staff carry out their jobs with the desire to satisfy the needs of the diverse elements that make up a school—students, teachers, administrators, counselors, and parents.

Cooking, Cleaning, Maintenance, Transport

Many service functions are performed by specially trained members of the administrative staff. The cafeteria workers prepare and serve lunches for students and teachers. Keeping rooms clean and maintaining well-kept school grounds are the major jobs of custodians. The men of the maintenance crew build, supply, and replace all items and fixtures in school property. Getting students to school safely and on time each day is the vital task of bus drivers. In their varied capacities these workers supply and maintain many co-curricular functions that are necessary facets of school operation.

In the office students are constantly keeping the administrative staff busy, particularly counselors and their secretaries. Before classes each morning secretaries cleared student absences and tended to student needs.

Advertising is the lifeblood of the free enterprise capitalist system. Symbolic of the devotion of community interests to school affairs, the businesses that advertise in school publications do so to register their active concern and financial support for school activities. Investing in the education of youth represents the commitment to community betterment that businesses affect. Firms involved in school advertising gain publicity while helping to bear the burden of supplying funds for club activities and social events. The source of interest in community schools deserves the support of the community in patronizing advertisers.

Acknowledgements

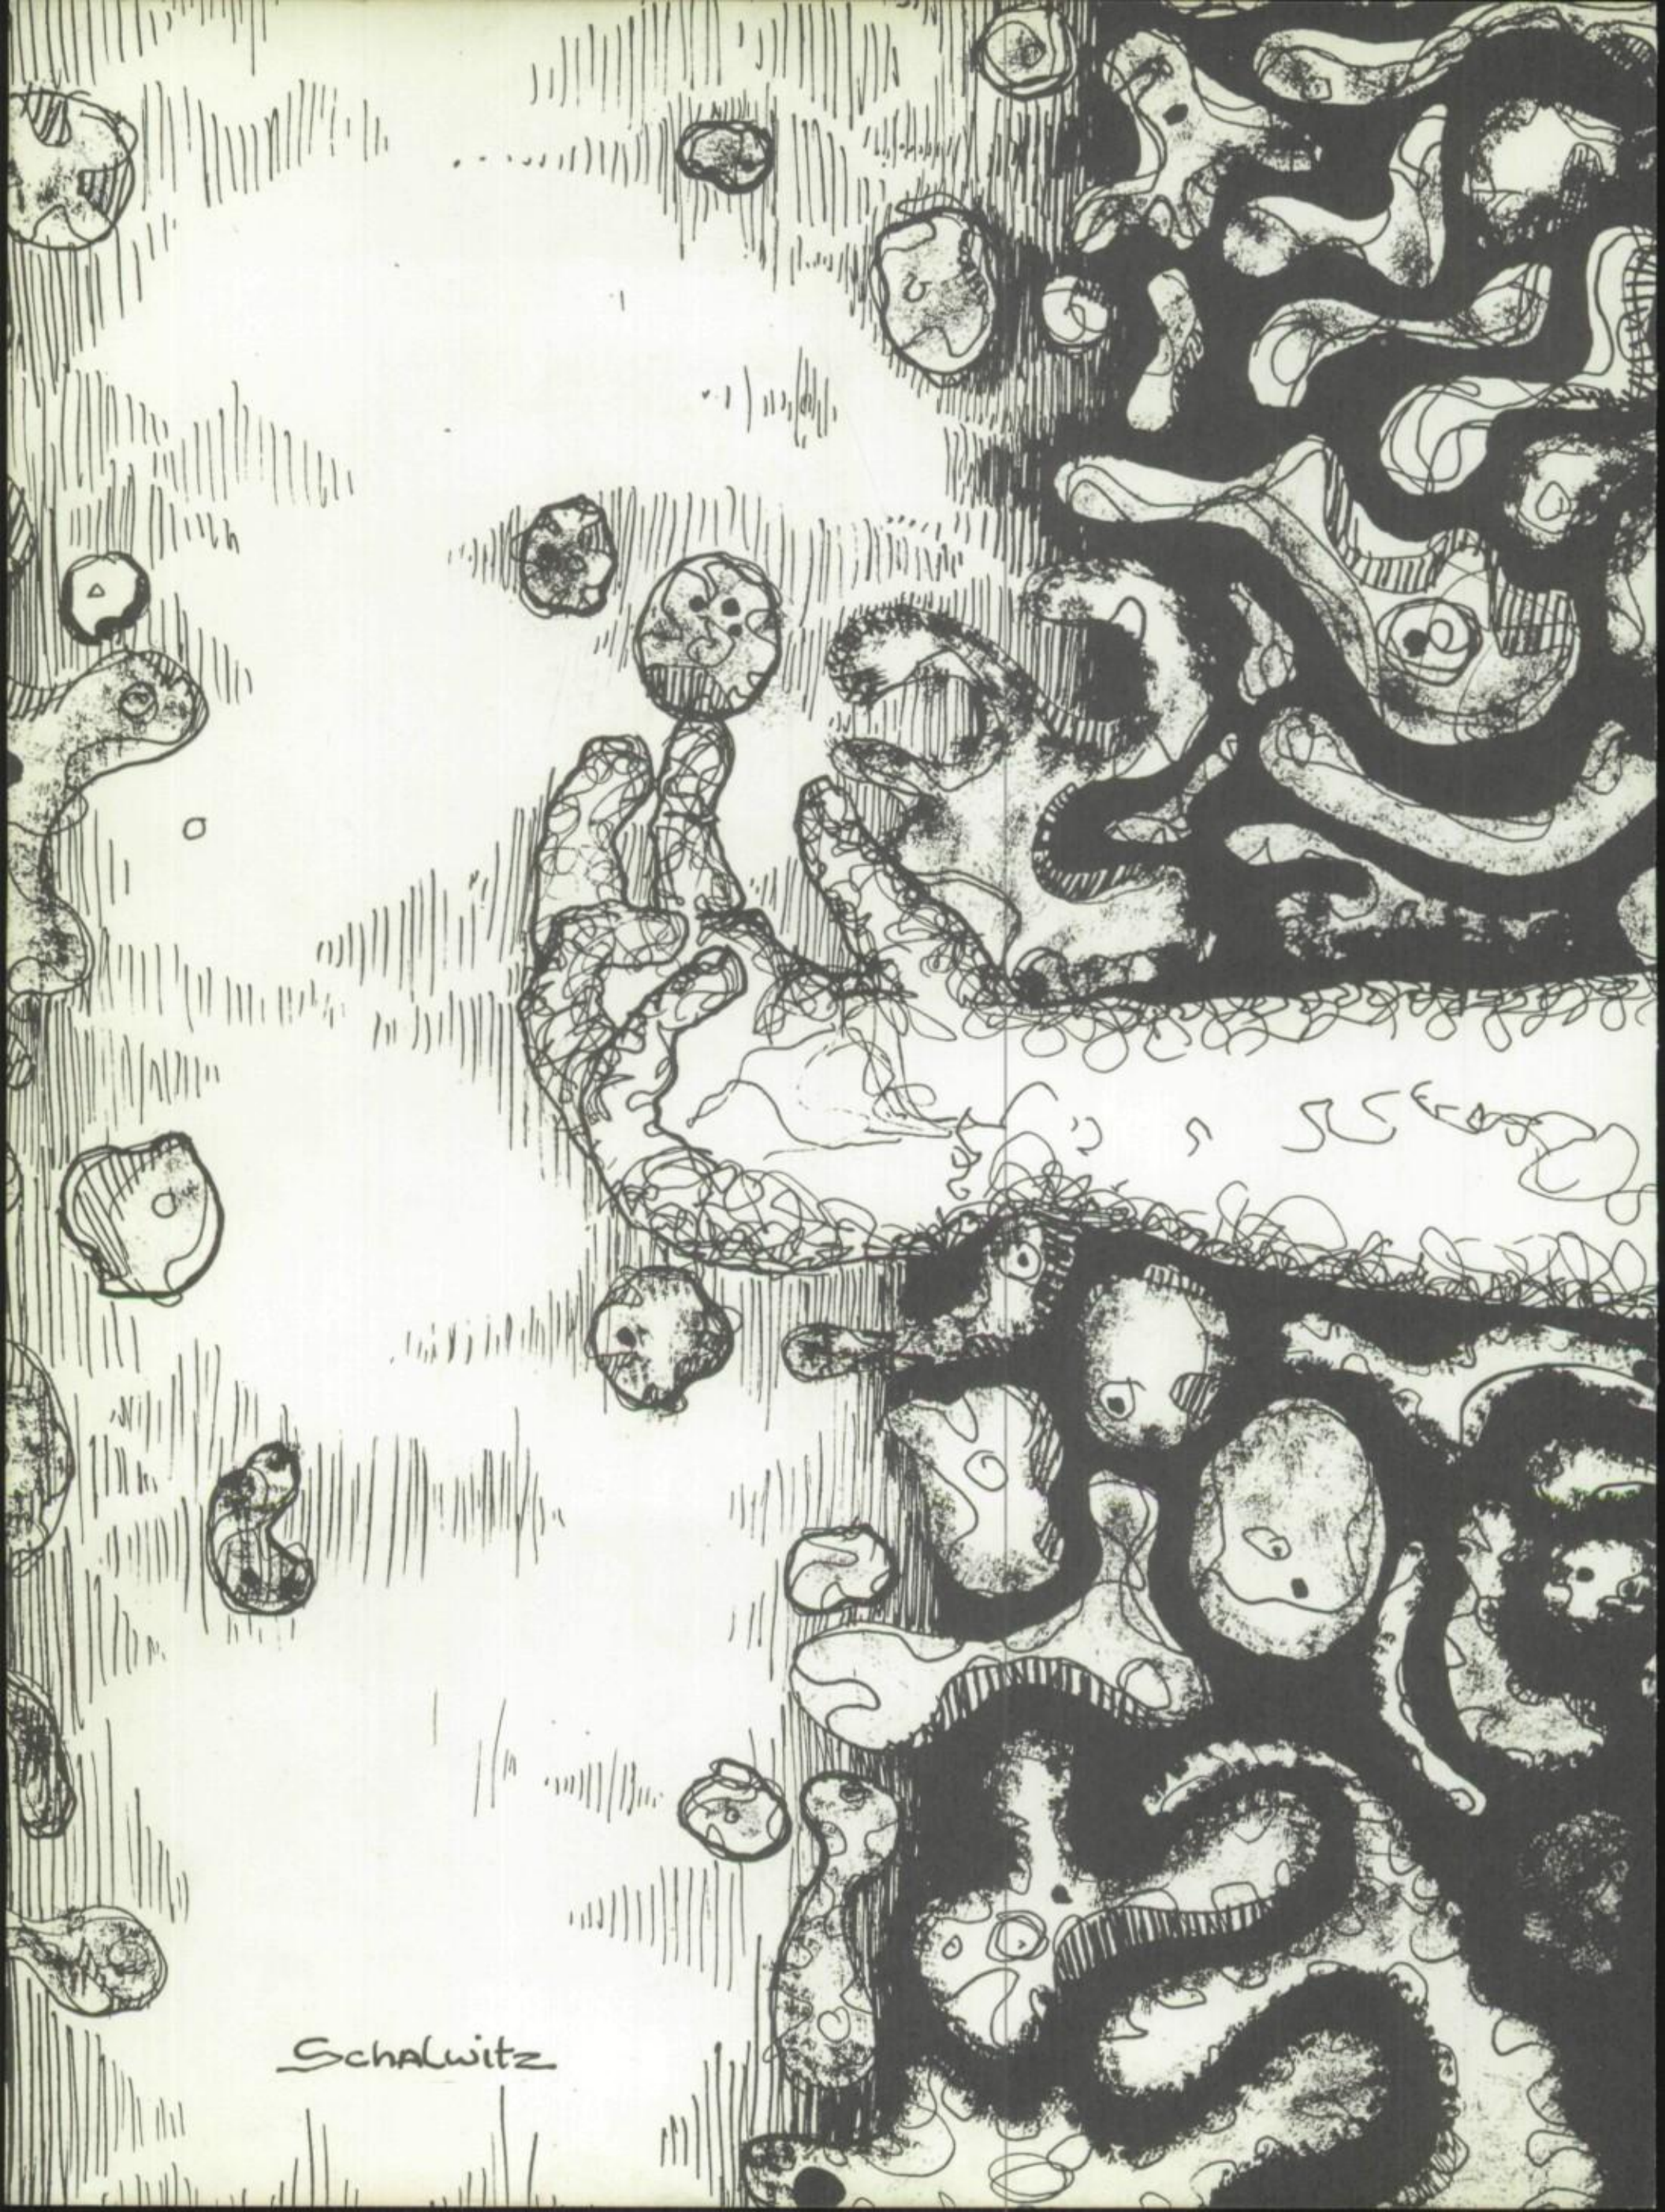

The Oracle Staff wishes to acknowledge the following organizations and individuals for their devoted efforts toward making the 1968 Oracle possible:

Mr. Robert Ozias of Lederer, Street, and Zeus Company for coordinating production and publication of the Oracle;
Mr. Al Dennis and his photography classes for taking and developing the majority of pictures in the Oracle, and David Blanks for special photography assignments;
Ray Greers Photography Studio for taking senior pictures and all pictures in the advertisement section;
Tracy Schalwitz for the art work;
Advertising patrons who helped meet the costs of Oracle production;
FBLA for typing the Senior Activities Index;
Mrs. Winona Herndon for handling and accounting for all yearbook funds and receipts;
Mrs. Jean Stutzman and Mrs. Georgia Clark for providing the staff with pertinent information and supplies;
Mr. Paul Meyers for providing invaluable guidance to the staff.

Sincere thanks to all concerned.

Jack Barker

Miss Walker,
I guess there's not much more I could say that hasn't already been said before. My four great- wonderful years are almost over and they couldn't have been better! I don't know what I would have done if you hadn't always been near to help guide me in the right direction. You have made these four years the best of my life! I've gone through about everything together and I know it will continue as the days of our happy lives continue. It's going to be very hard for me to adjust to college life - not having you close by — I still find it hard to believe that I will soon be graduating; — it seems only yesterday I walked into your 3rd period P.E. class and you called my name "Sharon Evenson, #13". I'll never forget our many experiences together Miss Walker, the sad ones and the happy ones — I'll never ever forget you Miss Walker! You could never imagine how much you really really mean to me and my very deep love for you. Like I said in my poem, "It was You!" for everything Miss Walker. Thank-you for everything all my love forever,
"Sunshine"
